"Miss Gertie?" Fletcher reddened uneasily. "I didn't say I was going to Lone Tree, did I? Besides, I reckon—I didn't know you'd been prospecting around there."

"All gals is alike to me," returned Luke sententiously. "When one ain't to home another will do just as well so long as they'll sing and play and amoose me. As I was saying, just tell Miss Gertie I'll come around next Wednesday. So long, Bert, You're sure going to have a moon."

Fletcher strode away without a word, his joke on Luke Prentice quite forgotten in his own misery. Frank Blair might take the opportunity of his being there with Estelle to run over to Lone Tree and thus steal a march on his rival. ing forth into the moonlit night and assailing the Chincapin and demanding an explanation from Estelle. There must be some reason for her not caring to see him again, and if the reason was Fletcher—well, Luke would see that Fletcher stopped flirting with Miss Glbbs and gave allegiance to Estelle Blair.

Suddenly he arose and made a nasty toilet. Then he came out, saddled stebbins and rode away down the moonlit trail. When he came to the place where the trails divided, one leading straight to the town of Perdition, another to the right leading to Lone Tree and one to the left—the Lone Tree and one to the left-the Chincapin trail-he hesitated, and then Chincapin trail—be hesitated, and then with a sharp sigh he turned into the Lone Tree trail and cantered briskly toward the home of Miss Gertle Gibbs. Here he spent a pleasant evening listening to Miss Gertle's vivacious chatter, enjoying the conventional music she clattered from the tinny plano and even joining in the chorus of that popular melody "Because I Love You So" until old man Gibbs pounded on the parlor door and requested silence that

It was said that Luke Prentice mounted on Stebbins hed worn the Chincapin trail down to before. It was a fact that he had fallen desperately in love with Estelle Blair and that for a time at least she appeared to reciprocate his feeling. Lately, however, Estelle had grown cool and distant, and now their friendship had been severed by the curt little letter she had sent advising him that she would not be at home hereafter on Wednesday nights.

"So did I," said Frank Blair bitterly. "I suppose you did, too, Luke?"

"Nary!" protested Luke Prentice.
"I've been ringing a belle up to the Chincapin, Frank. That's an old joke, but it's true, brother-in-law!" He reached down a brown paw, and the two others sprang to meet it and shake it heartily, forgetting their own chagrin in the happiness of their comrade.

was that Estelle had tearned to love somebody else. The same what Fletch er occasionally called at the Chincaph to see Frank Bilair, and he must at the same time have opportunities of meeting Frank's lovely sister. But both Fletcher and Bilair were rival suitors for the fair hand of Miss Gertle Gibbs, the schoolteacher at Lone Tree, and it was not supposed that either ever wavered in his allegiance to the plump little beauty. As a matter of fact, the two rivals were close companions, and it was whispered that in this way each kept track of the other's movements.

Nevertheless Luke felt a fierce stab of jealousy as Bert Fletcher emerged from the bunk house immaculate in a white shirt and wearing in his boson the large yellow topaz pin he had won from Mexican Pete. His mustances were twisted flercely, and his black eyes sparkled maliciously as he looked at Luke Prentice playing solitaire by the light of a lantern.

"Any messages you want to send. Luke?" teased Fletcher as he passed by.

You can look at this picture of the star you can look at this picture of the star with your maked eye if you like. But you can see it better and examine it more closely if you look at it with a small magnifying glass. And this is the glass at the small end of the telescope. It magnifies the picture made by the big glass at the other end of the instrument. All telescopes are built on this principle. Sir William Herschei was the first to arrange matters a little differently. He took away the glass from the big end and admitted the rays coming straight into the tube in parallel lines. Then a, the bottom of the big tube he placed a bright concave mirror made of burnished metal. When the entering rays fell upon this mirror they were again bent to a point called a focus, which was the picture of the star. To look at this picture he

The Hunter Was After Meat, but Got The Hunter Was After Meat, but Got Instead a Stone.

In 1880 a hunter in New South Wales took a fancy for some kangaroo meat, so he made a trip through the mulga with no companion but his gun. He had no need of either guides or dogs, as he was an experienced bushman.

so the hunter followed as fast as he could.

The trail gradually grew fainter as the wounded animal bled less freely, and its pursuer was often obliged to stoop and examine the ground closely for the telltale signs. After several hundred yards had been covered without seeing any more crimson spots the hunter began to think his quarry had escaped, when he saw a single fleck of red before him.

As he bent to look for more flecks the red-changed to an iridescent pale green, and he say it was a gem stone that lay before him. The kangaroo was not bagged, but the White Cliffs opal fields were discovered.—New York Press.

Why is it that all our musicians in writing a mattical song invariably use a portion of the best known hornpipe is the introduction, "vamp," or counter-melody? Why do the open fifths in the bass always appear in rustic songs? Because it can't be helped, it seems. Our popular Irish songs always have a bar or two of a well known old Irish melody or a drome bass, otherwise they wouldn't be Irish. # Mr. Van Rockagan

A Story of 1940

By F. A. MITCHEL

Mr. Van Reckagan alighted from his carriage, went into his 150 story building and ascended in his private elevator to his summer office on the roof. Divans, Persian rugs, rosewood cabinets inhaid with gold and jewels imparted a laxurious comfort, while the air was redolent of tropical plants.

Mr. Van Rockagan's name would seem to denote a mingling of Dutch and German origin. It is a combination of several names. In the early

In the early part of the present century nearly al the colossal fortunes held by individu als were united by death, marriage and other causes in one man, who, when the union was consummated, took the name of Van Rockagan. Unfortunately for the blessings that were to be derived from placing all the wealth in the United States in one man's hands, the railroad interest shad been combined by a similar process in another person. This person always wrote his name G. Harrihill.

Two more weeks passed without a report from Colonel Whistleton, then he appeared one morning in his employer's office and said:

"Watching the prisoner through a keyhole, your commercial highness, I saw him take a tablet from his vest pocket and put it in his mouth."

"A tablet?"

"Yes, a tablet. At any rate it was so small that he held it between his thumb and finger and swallowed it whole."

If a million men can be fed 300 days on a cent a day there is a saving of $200,000,000. If I can do that I can find a way to undermine him. Secure one of the tablets and bring it to me at once."

Another week passed. The colonel made another report. The prisoner carried no supply of tablets on his person. Moreover, he was not seen to swallow any more tablets.

"Bungler!" cried Mr. Van Rockagan. "You have made him suspicious. He has found a means of supply that you are not aware of and takes his daily meal when you are not observing him. Does he still retain his fesh?"

"He does. If he receives tablets from without it must be during the night, and he must eat them then."

The Cock Lane Ghost.

St. John's, Clerkenwell, is a mean structure architecturally, but possesses two interesting historical associations, one romantic and the other ludicrous. It is the headquarters of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, part of the choir of whose ancient priory can still be seen in the early English crypt. This crypt was the haunt of the "Cock lane ghost," which excited all London in February, 1762, and attracted Johnson, Goldsmith and Horace Walpole. The "ghost" proved, as Dr. pole. The "ghost" proved, as Dr Johnson surmised, to be the mischiev ous little daughter of a parish clerk.—

When William Wirt was engaged in writing the memoirs of Patrick Henry he turned for information to Thomas Jefferson, who had been associated with the orator for many years, asking his aid in furnishing biographical material for the work. The correspondence between Wirt and Jefferson, published in the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, from the manuscript collection of John Gribbel, has a decidedly interesting passage showing the opinion Jefferson held about his famous colleague. In answer to Wirt's first request Jefferson replies with an assent and adds a general and unfavorable summary of Henry's character:

Henry's character: "He was certainly the man who gave the first impulse to the ball of revolu-tion. were I to give his character in general terms, it would be of mixed aspect. I think he was the best humored man in society I almost ever knew, and the greatest orator that ever lived. he had a consumate knol-edge of the human heart, which di-recting the efforts of his eloquence enabled him to attain a degree of pop-ularity with the people at large never perhaps equalled. his judgment in other matters was inaccurate. The king of Syria did not take into account the God of Israel when he warred against Israel. Not many do even in the twentieth century. Even a great many preachers do not seem to know much about Him and still less about a people called Israel, although God never wrought for any other nation as He has done and will yet do for Israel (II Sam. 7, 23; Ps. cxivii. 20).

The king of Syria was more than once surprised to find the king of Israel elude him and thought that there must be some traitor in the camp who gave away his plans. When one of his servants reminded him that there was a prophet in Israel who could tell what he said even in his bedchamber (verse 12) he foolishly thought that he could take him equive, not considering that if the prophet could save the king of Israel he could also save himself. Learning that the prophet was in Dothan, he sent thither horses and charlots, a great host, and compassed the city about. And now they had him sure. So they had some reason to think, leaving out the supernatural.

The servant of Elisha seemed to think that the case was hopeless. But how grand the confidence of the prophet, "Fear not, for they that be with them" (verse 16). How like Paul's "If God be for us who can be against us?" (Rom. vill, 31) or David's "Though an host should encamp

Take another instance from the next chapter, when the Lord made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host, so that they arose and fied, leaving their tents and horses and asses and everything in their camp and fied for their lives (vil. 67). It is still true that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them" (Ps. xxxiv, 7).

Sometimes it is more for His glory to let the enemy take us and fill treat ins, as in the case of Joseph, Michain, Jeremiah, Daniel and his friends Peter and John, Paul and others. The night on which our Lord Jesus gave Himself into the hands of His enemies for our sakes the could have had legions of angels for the asking (Matt. xxvi, 52-54). On one occasion he telephoned to his tailor that he wished to have a to his tailor that he wished to have a pair of trousers pressed, and the tailor sent a boy to his residence to get them. The bishop's sister admitted the messenger and called upstairs, "Willie, the boy has come for your trousers."

Family Prescience.

Nearly every family picks the wrong member for the fool.—Life. Couldn't Do It.

They Don't Have to Worry About Food, Clothes or Shelter.

In describing Uap, one of the Caroline islands, Dr. W. H. Furness says that children become more or less public property on that Island as soon as they are able to run about from house to house.

They cannot without extraordinary exertion fall off the island, and, like little guinea pigs, can find food anywhere. Their clothing grows by every roadside, and any shelter or no shelter is good enough for the night. They cannot starve. There are no wild beasts or snakes to harm them. What matters it if they sleep under the high, star powdered celling of their foster mother's nursery or curl up on mats beneath their father's thatch?

There is no implication here that parents are not fond of their children. On the contrary, they love them so much that they see their own children in all children. It is the ease of life and its surroundings which have atrophied the emotion of parental love.

When a father has merely to say to his wife and children. "Go out and by the say to his wife and children, "Go out and the work of the property of the care in the care i phied the emotion of parental love.

When a father has merely to say to his wife and children, "Go out and shake your breakfast off the trees," or, "Go to the thicket and gather your clothes," to him the struggle for existence is meaningless, and without a struggle the prizes of life are held in light esteem.

Somebody's children are always about the houses and to the fore in all excitements, and never did I see them roughly handled or harshly treated.

MASTERING A TEMPER.

The Method by Which Marion Crawford Controlled His Anger.

Mrs. Hugh Fraser, sister of the late F. Marion Crawford, tells some interesting stories of him in her book, "A Diplomatist's Wife In Many Lands," It was at the Villa Negroni, Rome, that Crawford was born, an event which Crawford was born, an event which so delighted his father that, as Mrs. Fraser says, "my father was beside himself with joy and showered presents on all of us to make us understand and share it."

When young Francis was about ten years old it dawned upon him that he had a violent and uncontrollable temper, and with the simplicity which marked all his character he decided to get it in hand.
"One member of the family constantly irritated him to the verge of frenzy, and he invented a form of self discipline which very few children would have thought of imposing on themselves. My mother entered his room selves. My mother entered his room one day and found him walking round and round it, carrying on his back a heavy wooden shutter which he had lifted off its hinges at the window.

lifted off its hinges at the window.

"My dear child, 'she exclaimed, 'what are you doing?"

"Getting over a rage,' he replied doggedly, continuing the exercise. 'When I am so angry that I want to kill somebody I come in here and carry the shutter three times round the room before I answer them. It is the only way."

THE SILVER DOLLAR.

Many Changes In Its Design Since It Was First Issued.

The silver dollar has undergone a great many changes since it was put in circulation in 1794. On the face of the first dollar there was stamped the head of a young woman turned to the right and with hair flowing, as if she was in a gale of wind. But in 1796 congress came to her rellef and ordered her hair to be tied up with a bit of ribbon. The fifteen starts which appeared on the first dollar were after this reduced to the original thirteen in recognition of the number of states.

The Retort Courteous James Russell Lowell was once a guest at a banquet in London where he was expected to reply to a toast. The speaker who preceded Mr. Lowell said many contemptuous things about the people of the United States, avowing and repeating again and again that they were all braggarts. As American minister at the court of St. James Lowell could hardly overlook this speech, so as he rose he said smillingly: "I heartily agree with the gentleman who has just spoken. Americans do brag a great deal, and I don't know where they got the habit don't know where they got the habit James I don't know where they got the hat it, do you?"

FIRST AID IN FAINTING.

Lower the Head to Let the Blood Back to the Brain.

Fainting is a loss of consciousness due to the diminution of blood supply to the brain. It occurs most frequently in weak, sensitive women, but may occur also to men as well. It usually peepers in crowds or in crowded halls. Fainting usually lasts only a few dinutes, and the person recovers im-nediately when taken out into the resh air, but there are cases in which it lasts much longer, sometimes for an hour or more. The first aid treatment of fainting is usually very simple. Take the person out into the fresh air and lay him flat on the back, with the head lower than the foet.

air and lay him flat on the back, with the head lower than the feet.

This can be done by grasping the feet and holding the body so that the head hangs down, or take an ordinary straight back chair, turn it over so that the back forms an angle with the floor and place the person on the back of the chair with the head hanging down. This position with the head hanging down favors the flow of the blood back to the brain.

CHOOSING A PRESIDENT.

Early Methods That Paved the Way National Conventions.

History records that George Washington was chosen president of the United States without first having been nominated and even without an opposing candidate. So was his successor, in office, John Adams. In the language of the street the presidency was in the case of each of these distinguished patriots "handed to him on a silver platter." The presidency went, as it were, by common consent to the founders of the republic, to whom a grateful people looked for continued service and guidance.

In the early days president choosing, according to the primitive way, was as simple compared to modern methods as a kindergarten exercise beside a course in four dimension mathematics. "I think I leaned over to pick up something and a man struck me on the head with something—I know it was his suit case, for he apologized afterward. But what am I doing here? Where's Edith?"

"She's probably waiting for you wherever you left her. Hold on, there, Dick—not so fast, my boy! It's 9:30 now and"— Dick's brandished arm cut the doctor's sentence short.

change by which the electors should change by which the electors should vote for only one person for president vote for only one person for president.

Two or three object lessons, too, of irresponsible and haphazard action by the electoral college, throwing the choice of president to the house or of vice president to the senate, because no one had a majority of the votes cast, showed the necessity of centering the efforts of the newly aligned political parties each on a single president. This Submarine Graveyard.

"Davy Jones' locker," that perilous spot mention of which so often comes from the lips of sailors, is not shown on any ocean chart principally because it is not really a settled place, but if any ocean death trap deserved the title it is the Thames estuary.

The British naval authorities have a chart upon which is marked the postion of wrecks, shown by black dots. On this chart the Thames mouth tract is a solid black spot. So numerous have been the wrecks the dots run together. The point where the black dots actually pile the one on the top of another is the Kentish Knock, and this is the place among all of the ocean danger spots that deserves the title of Davy Jones' locker.

At the Kentish Knock it is not keel shattering rocks nor piercing points of

At the Kentish Knock it is not keel shattering rocks nor piercing points of coral that wreck the ocean travelers. It is sand—treacherous, clinging sand—that graps the doomed ship with a grip of steel and holds it firmly while the angry sea beats it to fragments. Many a vessel posted at Lloyd's as missing would be duly accounted for if the Knock sand would give up its prey. There is no hope for ship or man when Neptune asks toll at the Kentish Knock, for the nearest land is twenty miles away and the nearest lifeboat at Margate, thirty miles diretant.

The sands of the ocean are far more

The sands of the ocean are far more dangerous than rocks. The sand banks extend over more space and therefore offer more points of contact than the rocks, which usually rise in slender pinnacles. The waters flow over the sands in smooth waves, and there are no warning breakers.

Next to the Thames mouth tract in point of danger is the Hooghly, the salt water river on which Calcutta stands. The most trying part of a large vessel's voyage from New York to Calcutta is the last few miles of this calm river. In this strange stream, in windless weather and flat calm water, vessels have been lost—dashed to pieces on the dreaded ever shifting sand banks by the force of the tides.

The sands grasp the keel of the

Another danger point dreaded by the naster mariner has neither sand nor nocks, but a great submarine waterfall. In the English channel there is point just beyond the Shambles bank where there is a sudden drop in the sea bottom. The channel tides sweep over the banks and down this sudden drop, creating rapids equal in fury to those of Niagara. The American ship Georgian foundered in Portland race, the name by which this danger point is known, and all hands went down with her.

When the gales blow heavy seas boom upon the shoals with sufficient force to shatter the stanchest vesses afloat, and when the wind ceases the beaches are strewn with the bodies of those who have perished. The distance from the shore is too great and the surf too heavy for the life savers to reach a struggling vessel, and few lives are saved at this point. Ten vessels have been wrecked in this trap in a single week.

GETTING TIRED.

Fatigue That Follows Monotony of Work or Exercise.

It is said that for horses the hardest road out of London is the most level one. There are no hills to climb and descend, and the tired borse has no chance to rest one set of muscles willed another works. Monotony produces fatigue, and because this particular road is one dead, monotonous level more horses die on it than on any other leading out of London. We can even take a charitable view of the time taken daily by the twork of writing and tired by contact with the hard keys of her machine, and the different feeling of the bair and the little plays and movements of her fingers are congested by the work of writing and tired by contact with the hard keys of her machine, and the different feeling of instance, the fingers move up and down hardly more than a quarrier of an inch as they travel across the page. Yet this is hard work for their little muscles and burns up tissue in the fingers very fast. If rest intervals are too short and infrequent, there is not time for the removal of the waste products of this destruction through the normal channels of the body and congestion results. The feeling of fatigue or pain that follows long continued use of any of the muscles is due to the influence of such plosnous material, as well as to the stretching of the blood which settles there.—Paul the follows long continued use of any of the muscles is due to the influence of such plosnous material, as well as to the stretching of the blood which settles there.—Paul the follows long continued to the fingers very fast. Puzzled the Englishman.

A Philadelphian who had been entertaining a friend from London for several days noticed that his guest appeared to be in deep thought at dinner the other evening. "What's the matter the other evening. "What's the matter?" he asked, fearing that the Englishman was Ill or worried or homesisk. "I'm rawther puzzled, old chap," replied the Londoner. "I really cawn't make out what the blawsted bounder meant. I was lost in your city the other day, and I dropped into an apartment house to ask my way. A fellow was loading freight on a bally lift. Jack Robinson.

Foxton Ferguson of Oxford university, speaking of the old time ballers, said that as most of the public cutions took place in some park or rect place, where everybody could present, the onlookers oftentimes used themselves by singing ballads ing the entire history of the victim, at this is the reason why so many of the eld songs are concerned with the gman and the gallows tree. Particularly interesting also was his description of the origin of the expression, "heard so often in both England and America. It came, he said, and he had a proposed the said and America. It came, he said, and he had a proposed the said and America. It came, he said, and he had a proposed the said and America. It came, he said, and he had a proposed the said and America. # WOBURN NATIONAL BANK

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of the proposition of the pro of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

when Chandler came home from college his uncle told him that he had a special plan for him. Chandler was an orphan who had inherited a large certare, and his uncle was his guardian and would be for a few months, when the heir would come of age. A widow of the name of Atherton had bought some contiguous property that Chandler had honglit some contiguous property that Chandler had long evoted. "It's very hot, and you look tired. Won't you rest yourself?" The girl moved to one end of the bench that he might occupy the other.

"Thank you very much," he replied, seating himself.

This was all very fortunate. He would have an opportunity to chat about the widow.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to say to Mrs. Atherton on her return that Mr. Herbert Chandler, a neighbor, called to pay his respects."

"Mr. Bussing's nephew?"

"Yes."

"Yes."

"I hear she is very handsome and appears far younger than that."
He had heard no such thing. He was working the pump handle. The girl smiled.

"Something amuses you," he added soberly.

"Excuse me. I may as well confess that I know your errand. I heard Mrs. Atherton and your guardian uncle talking over the union of the two, estates. It is quite natural that you should be interested to learn something about her, especially what you have just referred to, since she is so much older than you."

Chandler drew within himself. "How did it happen," he said coldly, "that you overheard"—

"All that part of it you must get from her." This was said in a tone that indicated she had not relished the implied charge of eavesdropping.

"You consider it very mercenary, I

"I certainly would unless you came to love each other."
In this vein they chatted on for some time, when Chandler arose.
"I presume," he said, "that you will inform Mrs. Atherton of this meeting und so much of which her peaced he and so much of what has passed be ween us as you think will interes

She looked up at him with a charming expression.

"Sit down," she said, "and I'll tell you a story. Your uncle and Mrs. Atherton were very anxious to unite these estates, as you know. Neither of them had any idea of a marriage between you and her. And now I have a confession to make. I am more than Mrs. Atherton's secretary; I am her daughter. Your uncle suggested to mother that the property be united by a marriage between you and me. But such proposals usually miscarry. Their plan was to bring you and me together, you thinking that you were opening megotiations to marry mother. They were obliged to let me into the secret. I agreed to carry out their plan-that is—well, provided I liked you."

"And you do, don't you?" said Chandler in a pleasing tone.
"Well, so-so," was the answer.
"Then the plan is to be carried out."
"What plan?"
"Why, the one you have just referred to."

"Oh! I meant the plan of making you think you were opening negotia tions to marry mother."
"Oh!"

"That's all I had to do with it."

"That's all I had to do with it."
"I think you had a great deal more to do with it."
"I don't see what."
"Well, while you have been receiving me in place of your mother you have got me used to being with you. Besides, think how advantageous it will be to unite the estates."
"I care nothing about the estates."
"Or me?"
"I didn't say that, but I shall not marry for the purpose of uniting two properties."

"Then will you marry for the purpose of uniting two hearts?"
"I must be satisfied that such a un-pose of uniting two hearts?"

"I must be satisfied that such a union will be effected."
"I can answer for myself, but not for you. I love you dearly, and I wish you to be my wife."
"I will be your betrothed on trial. If I see that our union is to be a financial one I will break the engagement."
Such was the practical disposal of the subject. Chandler went from her to his uncle.
"Uncle." he said, "the properties will be united. Why didn't you introduce me to Miss Atherton in the first place?"
"Because when I was a young man I was introduced to a girl whom it seemed advisable I should marry. I took a violent dislike to her, and sim ply, I have since believed, because I felt obliged to love her. I have had cause to regret the failure of that match."

The union of hearts was complete, and the union of the estates followed.

Mount Etna is one of the great volances of the earth. It is great in size, eat in activity, great in beauty. In oltan district of New York and the urrounding counties. Its height is 11,000 feet above sea level. As to its lower, one of these eruptions some centuries ago killed 80,000 people, which is probably more than Vesuvius as ever done in all its existence as a volcano, not excepting the great volcano, not excepting the great ruption of 79 A. D., which destroyed he cities of Herculaneum and Pomeii. As to its beauty, this is also ery difficult to describe. When he called again he did not acknowledge to himself that he would like to have another tete-a-tete with the secretary. He was received by her with a message from Mrs

Methods of Two Famous Cross Ex aminers of the Irish Bar.

Two famous cross examiners at the Irish bar, says Francis L. Wellman in "The Art of Cross Examination." were Sergeant Sullivan, afterward master of the rolls in Ireland, and Sergeant Armstrong. Barry O'Brien in his "Life of Lord Russell" describes their methods with perjured witnesses.

"Sullivan," he says, "approached the witness quite in a friendly way, seem ed to be an impartial inquirer seeking information, looked surprised at what the witness said, appeared even grateral for the additional light thrown on the case.

"'Ah, indeed! Well, as you have said this is a very intenigent man."

"So playing the witness with caution and skill, drawing him stealthily on, keeping him completely in the dark about the real point of attack, the 'little sergeant' waited until the man area, in the menhead than down him and shook him as a terrier would

"The big sergeant (Armstrong) had more humor and more power, but less dexterity and resource. His great weapon was ridicule. He laughed at the witness and made everybody else laugh. The witness got confused and lost his temper, and then Armstrong pounded him like a champion in the ring."

Deceived by a Cloud.

The instinct of animals is sometimes supposed to be more infallible than tuman reason, but a scientist's observations of the katydid rather contradict that opinion. The katydid, with its musical membranes, produces two distinct "songs," one peculiar to the other a daytime tune, which is rather a rasp than a melody. Wild Duck Hunters In China Are Wily

Wild Duck Hunters In China Are Wily In Their Methods.

A full grown wild duck is one of the most wary of all animals, and many are the devices of hunters in various parts of the world to kill or to capture it. There is one method of taking wild ducks in considerable numbers practiced in China and elsewhere in the east which is sufficiently unknown to occidentals to prove of interest.

The natives see that a large number of big calabashes, or gourds, shall always be left floating on the water frequented by the birds till they come to regard them as part and parcel of their resorts.

The duck hunter chooses his time, The duck hunter chooses his time, and, putting one of the calabashes, with holes cut for his mouth and eyes, upon his head, he wades through the lake, taking care to keep the whole of his body beneath the surface. He cautiously approaches the unsuspecting will fowl and, catching one of them by the leg, pulls him with a sudden jetk beneath the water, causing hardly more commotion of the surface than the duck itself when it dives or splashes or plunges for its food. He wrings its neck under the water and fastens it to his belt. Then he deals fastens it to his belt. Then he deals with another and another in the same fashion till he makes his retreat, equally unnoticed, with a whole gir-dleful of captured wild ducks around his waist.-Exchange

SPIDERS' WEBS.

The strength of the spider and of the materials it employs is something almost incomprehensible when the size of the insect and the thickness of its thread are taken into account. Recent experiments have shown that a single thread of a web made by a spider which weighed fifty-four milligrams supported endwise a weight of four grams, or seventy-four times the weight of the spider itself.

When, therefore, a spider spins a web to let hiraself down from the ceiling materials it employs is something al-

from the branch of a tree and we e him descending without perceiv-g his thread at all we may be perfeetly sure that he is not only in no danger of falling, but that he could carry seventy-three other spiders down with him on his invisible rope. Knowing this fact with reference to a single thread, we need not be sur-prised that the threads of a web, inter-woven and re-enforced one by another, have a very considerable strength and are able to hold bees and wasps, them-selves very powerful in proportion to tly sure that he is not only in no

It Takes Quick Thinking Players to Make a Successful Team.

The greatest difficulty in building up ball teams in this day, when the game has become a business as well as a sport, is in securing what we know as "thinking ball players." There are any number of ball players in the minor leagues who have natural physical ability, but it is very rarely possible to secure men who have that peculiar faculty of being able to think and act simultaneously.

inct with some ball players to mak stinct with some ball players to make the proper play at the proper time. It would be possible to count on the fingers of the two hands the men in the league who are "quick thinking ball players." The team that is blessed with a majority of that class of players is the one that usually wins the championship. A team must have at least two thinking ball players to be a contender, and if it has four the championship is in sight.—John J. McGraw in the Metropolitan.

It was very modest, consisting of four pages, each containing a single column. Louis XIII. was a frequent contributor to this first of newspapers and took special pleasure in the work. The great cardinal also wrote for it, his weakness being a fondness for literary composition.

A number of the larger banking institutions employ from one to half a dozen men whose sole duty is to examine every check that comes in through the clearing house and vouch for the genuineness of the signatures.

To the ordinary citizen it seems nothing short of marvelous that a signature clerk will instantly recognize the slightest alteration in a signature, with thousands of checks passing through his hands each day, many of them drawn by depositors who sign but a few checks in the course of a year, but an expert signature clerk can carry in his mind accurate photographs of 5,000 or more signatures and rarely has to refer to the signature In 1772 dandyism became again par-amount. A band of young bloods re-turned from an extended tour abroad, and while in Italy they had contrived to get several new ideas about dress into their somewhat empty heads. Fired with an ever growing sense of their own importance as arbiters of fashion, they formed themselves into a fashion, they formed themselves into a group known as the Macaronic club, in contradistinction to the good old fashioned Beefsteak club of London.

The Macaronies dressed their hair in enormous side curis, with a hideous knocker-like twist at the back. With this exaggrated colfure a tiny hat was worn, which it was correct for the wearer to raise with his tasseled cane.

A soft white handkerchief was tied in a huge bow under the Macaroni's chin. His coat was short, and his tight knee breeches were made of striped or flowered silk. Thus garbed, with innumerable dangling seals, two watches, at least, silk stockings and diamond buckled shoes, the dandy walked abroad, eminently satisfied with himself and quite convinced that his appearance was greatly envied.—"Beau Brummel and His Times."

Pretty Heavy Umbrellas. The great objection to umbrellas 100 years ago was their weight, and when it is stated as a matter of fact that the very smallest umbrella then weigh no less than three and a half pounds it will probably be admitted that the ob will probably be admitted that the objection was a justifiable one. Instead

The chronometer must be mounted, not on a wall that vibrates, but upon a strong pler of masonry having a solid foundation; also it is best placed underground in a cellar to secure for it a temperature as nearly uniform as possible, for clocks do not run quite the same in hot weather as they do in cold.

By adjusting a metal that has the singular property of contracting under heat it is possible to overcome the variation in a measure, but the astronomer prefers to provide for his clock a temperature practically the same the year round. Grotesque Fashions In England In the Eighteenth Century.

Dandyism developed a new phase of quiet richness during early Georgian times, and the court exquisites were stately figures in finely laced shirts, long skirted coats and gold clocked stockings. The hats worn by the beau were modified reproductions of those in fashion at Versaliles, and the art of wearing them was shown in the tilt. In fact, different angles in the tilt, fentified the wearer's status and locality.

In 1772 dandyism became again paramount. A band of young bloods re-This Fertile Florida Region Is an Old Mountain Top.

One of the strange facts about the Everglades region of Florida is that it is really a decayed mountain top. A few miles north of Cape Sable is an outcrop of limestone which projects to Lake Okeechobee. This rim is from three to twelve miles from the ocean edge of the coastal plain on the east and a distance of fifty miles from the gulf on the west. So far as explored it extends all around the edge of the basin forming a complete cup. As a result of the weather and flowing water the run has been worn into fantastic shapes. The depth of the basin varies from a foot at the rim to as much as twelve feet in places, but generally the rock floor is from a depth of one to six feet.

And here is the secret of the fertility of the Everglades. Above the entire rock floor rises a layer of muck, formed of an alluvial deposit and of decayed vegetable matter. This deposit ratios are record.

Thomas Carlyle says that the term 'fourth estate' was first applied to the newspapers by Edmund Burke when speaking in the house of commons about 1790. # Slaves To Our Timepieces.

That's what someone said about us Americans. If it is so, it isn't our fault, is it? It's conditions. Modern strenuousness demands certain things of all of us. One of these things is that we must be on the spot at the right time.

We depend upon our timepieces to deal out the time to us. To YOU personally—does your watch rightly inform you? If so, take care of it. If not, let us talk watch to you. Because you can't afford to guess at the time.

The two men consulted in low voices and one of them, taking up a light, told me to follow him. I did so and told me to follow him. I did so and was led to a dingy room with one win dow in it. I threw up the sash and saw that I was about thirty feet from the ground. The lock on the door was on the inside. Altogether I considered the position favorable for defense. I concluded to stay in the room, even if I did not sleep, till dawn (about 3 o'clock). So I told the man I was satished and said good night to him, and he set down the light and went away. I was too tired to keep awake, but did not dare even to lie on the bed with my clothes on for fear of failing asleep. I sat in a chair, but even there I found myself nodding. When the poet said that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to love he should have added that in the spring a girl becomes frivolous.

The Buddingtons on May 1 moved into one of a block of houses fronting on a small park. Grace Buddington watched from a second story front window the delicate spring leaves come with the position. All the while he was position. All the while he was bending to show the chance for revenge. One day when he was "showing off" in the back yard, while his back was to the houses, he heard something in the part of the waiting to show the contempt for the girl for whose benefit he was posing. Finally came his chance for revenge. low his sleeves, he adjusted first one and then the other. But in doing so he noticed a spot on his right cuff and, taking out a snowy cambric hand-kerchief, endeavored to obliterate it. During all this time Miss Buddington was watching him from the window some dozen feet above, him and dow some dozen feet above, him and tien, and perhaps no woman could swer except for herself.

Miss Buddington now thought time that her admirer should do so thing in the way of courtship, so walted. The young man had sent the whereabouts of her room and learned that it was third story be his own being in a like position in dow some dozen feet above him and two or three feet to one side. While he was endeavoring to remove the spot from his cuff she disappeared for a few moments and when she returned held in her hand a pitcher of water. Extending her arm, she held the pitcher directly over the reflected streak of sunlight crossing the top of his silk hat.

But she refrained. Whether this was on account of pangs of conscience or a desire to enjoy the situation by prolonging the climax or from a dread of making an enemy instead of a own home. A window in each room adjoined. He contrived to get a note to his lady love by tying a string to the end of his cane and the note on the end of the string, whipping the missive into her open window. This led to an endless string between the two windows, over which passed bits of nothings, gradually warming up until they became words of love.

One morning Mrs. Buddington, who was nourishing some plants in her back yard, turning from them, happened to look up at the rear of her domicile. Her curiosity was excited by an endless string run on two pulleys, the one fixed to a window sill of the adjoining house, the other to the sill of one of her daughter's windows. The lady kept her own counsel, but the same afternoon, seeing the young man next door come in, she hurried out to the back yard and concealed herself under a tree, where she could keep watch of the endless string. prolonging the climax or from a dread of making an enemy instead of a friend of her immaculate neighbor there is no record. The sensation was certainly delicious. But the most delicately flavored wine must be swallewed at last, and presently, tipping the pitcher, she poured a stream down on her unsuspecting neighbor.

When Mr. Tippler—that was the young man's name, T. Pemberton Tippler—feit the water resounding as on a drumhead upon the top of his hat and splattering fountain-like all over him his first impulse was to stand from under, the second to look up to see whence it came. He was too late to see more than the pitcher and a cealed herself under a tree, where she could keep watch of the endless string. It was not long before it began to move, and with it a folded bit of white paper. A hand detached the paper, and in a few minutes another paper was crawling along the string in the opposite direction.

"Grace" said Mrs. Buddington the to see more than the pitcher and a shapely wrist disappearing within the window. But he had before seen the "Grace," said Mrs. Buddington the next morning at breakfast, "get ready to go to your Aunt Mary's. You will leave on the 2 o'clock train."

"Why, mother! What's that for?"
"Never mind what for. And you'll not come back here next autumn. You'will go to bourding school."
But boarding school falled to solve the problem. What there was in a pitcher of cold water poured over Mr. Tippler and his spick and span outfit to cement him to Miss Buddington as mortar will unite two bricks is a mystery. At any rate his love once thus planted grew furiously, and before the first term of school ended he had eloped with his lady love.

shapely wrist disappearing within the window. But he had before seen the young lady who had recently come to live next door and was especially got up with a view to disporting himself that she might see and admire him. Love scorned turns to hate. Mr. Tippler having come out to be admired and having been treated, as he considered it, contemptuously, he was quite sure, by the girl next door, he swore a great oath of revenge. A few days later Mr. Tippler while walking home saw Miss Buddington coming from the other digection. He involuntarily quickened his pace, then suddenly slowed up. He looked to the right and to the left and up at the sky. The stoops of their respective homes were side by side or, rather, there was but one stoop with a stone division. At first Mr. Tippler wished to meet Miss Buddington at the bottom of the steps that he might show his supreme indifference to her by turning his back upon her. Then he was afraid he would meet her. He took out his hand-kerchief and blew his nose. He carried a slik umbrella in his hand and while trying to walk with dignity tripped on it. His hat fell in front of him. The biggest bird's nest in the world not excepting the stork's, is built by the African grosbeak. It is really 10 ped on it. His hat fell in front of him, and he stepped on it. Grace Budding-ton, who at that moment turned to ascend the steps, giggled. Mr. Tippier was bolling with rage.
After that whenever Mr. Tippier caught sight of Miss Buddington approaching him he made a strenuous effort to appear unconcerned. The way ous size that at a little distance it is often mistaken for one of the native buts built in the trees so frequently found in wild tropical countries where man eating animals abound, and the only way to sleep in safety is to "roost high."

The birds usually select a thorn tree, probably because of the protection afforded by the sharp, long thorns against marauders. All around the next the roof of sticks, thatched with often mistaken for one of the nativ came out and he blew his nose. Finally when he passed her his face would be as red as a turkey-cock.

As for Miss Buddington, when she saw Mr. Tippler coming she would proceed on her way with the utmost composure. On passing the gentleman the only sign of embarrassment she showed was putting her palm to her back hair, but this should not be counted as embarrassment, for all women against marauders. All around the nest the roof of sticks, thatched with dry grass, projects to let the rain run off. A deep fringe of grass hangs from this cornice like a curtain to keep out any stray drops. These great nests are added to from year to year, each pair of mated birds building on the main nest. Sometimes the nest becomes too heavy, and the branch breaks or the great mass of sticks falls ed as embarrassment, for all women do that. Meanwhile the courtship was progressing finely. When Mr. Tippler went into the back yard he would seize the limb of a tree and pull himself up by his autos to show his strength to the girl next door, who, he felt sure was needing through the breaks or the great mass of sticks falls to the ground, destroyed by its own weight. The grosbeak is no larger than an English sparrow and just as gregarious.-New York Press.

Honesty Extraordinary.

A traveler writing in an Italian magazine says that the Swiss canton of Ticino is inhabited by the most honest folk it is possible to imagine. In most of the Ticinese villages, the writer says, the oldest inhabitants do not remember any case of thieving, however petty, within a lifetime. Lost objects when found must never be taken away; they must be left where they were dropped or placed in a conspicuous position so that the rightful owner can find his property more easily. The case is cited of an American woman tourist who lost her purse on felt sure, was peeping through the blinds at him. Then he would loll on

MUSICAL MOUNTAINS.

Singing Cliffs in the Pyrenees and Rearing Sands in Hawaii.

In certain parts of the world are mountains and hills which are said by the natives to sing. In the Pyrenees certain cliffs emit plaintive sounds resembling the strains of a harp. Two other cliffs in the same chain are called the "snorers." When the wind is in cullar sound not altogether musical. The faces of these cliffs are marked by deep guilles, open in front, which may be compared to the pipes of an organ. At certain times a stratum of air, held between the cliffs and bordering trees, closes the openings while the wind blows freely between through the guilles, or organ pipes, behind; hence the music that is heard.

At the confluence of the Orinoco and the Rio Meta are granite cliffs which sing at sunrise. Humboldt refers to sing at sunrise. Humboldt refers to the phenomenon as the musical stones

the phenomenon as the musical stones of the Orinoco. The music is caused by the rush of the expanding air through fissures partly closed by mica.

Many more examples might be cited to show that nature makes use of principles which have been adopted by man in the creation of musical sounds. Nor are the musical sounds of nature confined to rocks, mountains and bills, for in Hawaii is a sand bank fifty feet high which, when the hand is moved high which, when the hand is moved about in the loose sand, produces a sound like that of a melodeon. It is said that if the observer slides down the bank on his back, dragging both hands in the sand, the sound becomes as loud as faint thunder.—Harper's Weekly.

Stupidity frequently wears a mask of intelligence. I know business men who look like poets and poets who look like business men. Men of genius invariably look like idlots, and if you pick out the man who looks most eminent in a party you are sure to find he is a nobody. I always distrust men who look magnificent. Nature is a stingy creature. She seldom gives a man the double gift of being great and looking great. She took care to lame Byron and deform Pope and disfigure Johnson. But the crowning example of her jealous parsimony is Shakespeare. I have always been disappointed with Shakespeare's face. It does not live up to his poetry. It is dull, heavy and commonplace.—From "Adventures in Loudon."

Pockrich seems to have been the first man to be struck by the musical tone in glass, and so he thought the thing out and produced a scale on which he could play any melody.

He exhibited his discovery in Dublin and finally took it to England about the year 1750, where it became the sensation of the hour. Nothing was talked of but the marvelous, simple, new musical instrument. It seemed to the ears of the jaded Londoners that the Wide Apart In Temperament Were Thomas and Jane Carlyle.

That the Carlyles were an ill assorted couple no one could deny. She was a highly strung, nervous woman, very quick, able and impatient, disappointed with her married life and her postition, jealous of the admiration which Carlyle received at the hands of all his admirers, especially of one or two women, whom she found very unsympathetic.

That Carlyle adored her there is little doubt. He loved her with all the rough, passionate power of his nature, but he was a peasant in manner and character and lacking in all the little outward signs of devotion and affection which so many women exact and the absence of which they resent most bitterly.

Mrs. Carlyle found herself tied to an intribable scalars of the yadda Londoners that the beavening at so very simple an idea for making melody, the cognoscent of London went into raptures over the musical glasses. Another musical instrument that Pockrich developed as no man had ever dreamed of before was the drum. He had dreamed of harmony even in the drum. He planned an orchestra of drums only. There were to be twenty of them, varying in size and tone from the smallest trebles to the basses, to be played by one person standing with the drums arranged about him in a circle. Pockrich never succeeded in producing true melody from a concert of drums.

The musical glasses were the direct cause of Pockrich's death. It was while he was upon one of his musical tours in England in the year 1759 that the hotel in London in which he was sleeping caught fire and he was burnated.

MAKING STEAM WORK.

Unfortunate Inventors Who Antedated James Watt.

James Watt took out a patent on his steam engine in 1769, but as far back as 1543 there was a captain in Spain who constructed a vessel of 200 tons and propelled it at Barcelona in the presence of the Emparer Charles V. and propelled it at Barcelona in the presence of the Emperor Charles V. and his court by an engine, the construction of which he kept a secret. But an old document says that in it was a monster caldron of water and that there were two movable wheels on the outside of the vessel. The emperor was satisfied with its operation, but the treasurer of the kingdom objected to it, and so no encouragement jected to it, and so no encouragement was given to the enterprise. The poor inventor, whose name was Blasco de Guerere, wearied and disgusted at the Guerere, wearled and disgusted at the want of patronage, took the engine out of the vessel, and the secret of the machine was buried in his grave.

The incident was almost duplicated in France a century later. The famous Marian de l'Orme, a celebrated Frenchwoman, who lived to be 134 years old, told in a letter to an admirer dated [141] of a man confined in a years old, told in a letter to an admirer, dated 1641, of a man confined in a madhouse of Paris for urging that anything could be done by the force of steam. The man's name was Solomon de Coste, a native of Normandy, and it was because he had persistently followed Cardinal Richelleu, imploring him to take an interest in his invention, that he was put behind bars.—Kansas City Star.

There were no re-entorcements near at hand, and he knew that if an attempt was made to storm his defenses he and his men would be dead before help could come.

Dew Makes Most of Them Drop Frem the Trees at Night.

"It the tropies when the coconnut is wanted for planting." said an importer of the fruit. "He nuts are picked up when they fall from the tree where they have hung for about fourteen months in ripening. It is a fact not penerally known that a majority of the nuts drop at night, which probably accounts for the small loss of life by Jocoanuts failing upon the heads of the natives.

"The action of the heavy dew at night loosens the seal with which nature has provided the nut and allows it to fall. The nuts wanted for planting are either gathered into heaps or placed under sheds, where they are allowed to sprout before planting in order that good, healthy nuts may be selected, thus avoiding the possibility of planting blind nuts that will not sprout, in which case much time would be lost in starting the cocoannut walks, as the orchards are called. Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check. All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

"As well as three other brands," add ed Jim Lewis.

"Then why does the Widow Clancy lay claim to the critter?" demanded Jim Lewis scornfully.

"She says it's a 'stray,'" explained Harry Barry. "Seems her foreman told her that a critter that had as many as four different brands could rightly be claimed by anybody that found it." "Who's the foreman?" asked Gabriel

"Peter Henny."

"I'm wondering how he managed to fasten his thieving claws on the widder's money bags."

"She come out pore in health with a snug little sum that had been left to her by Clancy, who was in the building line somewheres east. I don't think she's a 'lunger' exactly, but Mrs, Clintock said she'd wore herself out over brands it. I saw it running away, and twent after it."

"It's my heifer," said the girl caimly, "You see, I'm Mrs, Clancy, and this heifer was grazing on my range when you drove her off."

"Of course it's mine. I saw you running it off my range. I am surprised!"

"This here is a lost critter," protested Crane wildly. "It belongs to whoever brands it. I saw it running away, and twent after it."

"It's my heifer," said the girl caimly. "You see, I'm Mrs, Clancy, and this heifer was grazing on my range when you drove her off."

Ever since the Three Star ranch, which adjoined the Lone Bull on the west, had been purchased by the widow of one Daniel Clancy, late of New York city, the red helfer had apparently staked a claim on the widow's property, for it mingled with her herds and seemed content to remain among the rather scrubby lot of cattle which Peter Henny had picked out for the newcomer.

The Lone Bull people had known very little about the Widow Clancy except that occasionally they had described a lone female figure galloping along the distant ridges on a buckskin pony. Mrs. Clintock had told them that the widow was like all widows that the widow was like all widows— fair, fat, forty and fascinating. "Also red hair," the boss' wife had added with a twinkle in her eye.

When the government gives out a million dollar cloth contract it seems to it that it gets material according to specificary. cloth contract it seems to it that it gets material according to specification. The specific contracts for variout sorts of cloth are elaborate and go into the technical side of the matter—the number of threads to be used to the yard, the kind of wool to be used in the manufacture—for the United States soldier has to be well dressed in clothes that will stand the strain of weather and of work. Right and Wrong Exercise.

The word "exercise" covers a multitude of sins. It is a very loose term used for any form of physical exertion, be it sweeping out a factory, walking home from the office or lifting dumbbells. To say "Exercise is beneficial" is a very inaccurate remark and a very dangerous belief. It is necessary to distinguish between right and wrong exercise. As often as not big muscles in arms, chest or legs are a calamity, for they actually shorten life unless the vital organs are proportionately developed to take care of them. Men are constantly wearing out their hearts and arterles with some form of violent work they call "exercise". If nissionary lesson, and it is certainly a grand missionary story, reaching or even to the kingdom when it shall b even to the kingdom when it shall be fully seen that "salvation is of the Lord" (il. 9). With this saying of Jonah I have in my mind the words of the Lord Jesus to the woman of Samaria, "Salvation is of the Jews" (John vi, 12). Putting the two together we have the great truth that salvation is of the Lord through the Jews. This is and will be seen to be true of all individuals and also of nations. All the redeemed in heaven and on earth owe their redemption to the blood of a Jew, and the nations as such will not be saved till the glory of the Lord is risen upon Israel. Then they shall come to her light and kings to the brightness of her rising (isa. ix, 1-3; ixil, 1-3; xxvii, 6; Jer. iii, 17; Zech. ii, 10-12). and the ball must be spun in an ununtural manner to get that peculiar "break."

The only other "sigh" of importance is the one the batter gives to the runer when he intends to hit the ball. If he wants the runner to start as he swings (the hit and run play) he gives him a certain sign. There are any number of signs used for this play. Sometimes the batter gives it by rubbing his hand over the small end of the bat. Again, he may give it by knocking the dust from his shoes with the big end of the bat.—John J. McGraw in Metropolitan Magazine.

Zech. ii, 10-12). We have in our lesson the only in-Zech. ii, 10-12).

We have in our lesson the only instance, as far as I know, of a whole city penitent. But when Israel shall have had her resurrection from the dead and a nation of Pauls shall go forth into all the world witnessing as He did in the power of the Spirit, knowing all languages and having all wealth at their command, whole nations shall turn to the Lord in true penitence and "All kings shall fall down before Him, all nations shall serve Him" (Ps. ixxii, 11).

The Lord Jesus spoke of the experience of Jonah in the belly of the fish, his preaching and the repentance of Ninevel, and those who question the truth of the story of Jonah question the veracity of Jesus Christ. It is the work of the devil to question the word of God or the love of God (Matt. xii, 39-41; xvi. 4; Gen. iii, 1-5).

Could there by a more vivid picture of the churches' indifference to the command of Christ in our Golden Text than that of Jonah on this ship? The only man who knew the true God is command of Christ in our Golden Text than that of Jonah on this ship? The only man who knew the true God is fast asleep, while the heathen sailors are diligently calling upon their gods. They only found out who he was and why he was there by questioning him.

In a certain place we read that Jesus could not be hid (Mark vil, 24), but some who bear the name of Christian seem to hide Him quite successfully. Contrast II Cor. iv, 10, 11; ii, 14.) Think of Samson and his fatal sleep, Peter, James and John usleep in the presence of great privilege and also of great suffering and consider if you need the question of chapter i, 0, and if so what will your answer be? As to the great fish prepared by the Lord to take care of Jonah I often wonder why people have been so long looking for fishes of the same kind, for the record does not say that the Lord made two great fishes to propagate the species, but that He prepared a great fish.

For aught we know the fish may have died when it finished its ministry to be a probably if the little fish. than that of Jonah on this ship? The Lord made two great fishes to propagate the species, but that He prepared a great fish.

For aught we know the fish may have died when it finished its ministry to Jonah, as probably did the little fish that brought the coin to Simon Peter. The winds of 1, 4; 19, 8, were special winds for the occasion, as were also the gourd and the worm of iv, 6, 7, special preparations for special ministry. I have long rejoiced in the truth of Eph. II, 10, and firmly believe that fall the good works of all the Lord's people are prepared beforehand for them to walk in. It is helpful to say concerning all things, pleasant or unpleasant, "prepared for me by infinite love."

With all Jonah's peculiarities he seems to have been a man full of the word of God, for his prayer in chapter il is almost wholly Scripture. In the margin of my Bible I note in his prayer in chapter il is almost wholly Scripture. In the margin of my Bible I note in his prayer in chapter to the Psalms, besides some from other or parts of Scripture. IMPORTANT CHANGE.

Their Importance is Much Greater Than Their Number.

Among the players we do not use the word "signal." With us it is a "sign." Here are not as many "signs" used on ball club as the public would believe, course the catcher must "sign" the her for every ball that he throws. At its to prevent confusion or, as we to keep from "crossing each ar." The catcher chan a sign for a rve ball, a fast ball and a slow one to ball players all curve balls, such the drop and the outcurve, are call it "a curve." The catcher gives the me sign for any one of them. We a not call a ball that jumps "in" a urve. Ball players do not recognize the incurve. That is called a fast ball. Any ball thrown by a right handed pitcher with sufficient speed will jump nuard to a slight degree. The out-curve and drop are unnatural curves, and the ball must be spun in an unnual manner to get that peculiar the only other "sign" of importance The only other "sign" of the other The only other The only other The only other The onl

The Awful Pressure of Water and Air That May Bury or Burst Them—The Helmet Telephone a Wonderful Aid

In Work and In Times of Danger. It is surprising to learn how many, uses there are for divers. The navy, of course, employs many to set submarine mines and torpedoes and to attend to investigations of the condition of ships' bottoms. Bridge construction companies use them, as do those who build dams, waterworks and reserved. build dams, waterworks and reservoirs. Waterworks in large cities keep a diver on their staff constantly. Wrecking companies need their serv-

The greatest advance ever made in the art, divers will tell you, is the combination of the telephone with the diving suit. Before its advent divers had to depend entirely upon pulls on the life line for communication with the surface and upon signs to each other when under water if two wished to communicate. Today the modern diving helmet is equipped with a telephone, and the diver can not only hear what is said to him from the su

But the physical drawbacks to the work are enormous. drawbacks to the work are enormous. For every ten feet a diver descends he sustains an additional pressure of four and a haif pounds over every square inch of his body. What this means may be better understood when considering the greatest depth ever made by a diver-204 feet. them for the information and benefit of the public:

The first report of President Keller of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company presents some interesting facts in a condensed form.

The total number of telephones connected with the New England's system at the end of 1910 was 388,022, this including sub-license.

including sub-licease, associated and connecting companies.

The wire mileage required to furnish service was 734, 204, of which 442,166 miles, or about three-fifths of the total,

The total number of employees was

For 1911 the estimated appropria ons are as follows: for new construct tions are as follows; for new construction and real estate, $4,000,000; for repairs and depreciation, $4,400,000.

The net earnings were slightly less than in 1909, and the profits, after the payment of dividends and after allowing for certain depreciations of stocks ing for certain depreciations of stocks and bonds, were $710.797 27 for 1910 as against $864,974 42 for 1909. the liabilities there is a balancing item of $2,469,314.50 credited to 'Inven-tory Adjustment." This footnote ex-plans that this valuation of the plant was made by the Massachusetts Highway Commission during its investiga-tion of the rate schedule, and that the result of this investigation showed that not only was the stock not watered but that the independent appraisal showed property largely in excess of book records.

There is in Germany what is known as the "German Pedigree Book," or "Deutsches Geschiechterbuch." The purpose of the pedigree book, according to a Berlin correspondent, is to record the ancestry not of nobles, but of bourgeols persons who can prove that they are of genuine middle class or working class ancestry and have no noble blood in their veins. The editor explains in his preface that, while many German nobles "out of court and material considerations have not kept their blood pure, there are many good business class families which have managed to do so." By thus encouraging the proper pride of such families the pedigree book is doing much to eradicate the traditional envy of the nobles. urpose of the pedigree book, accord-

Take a tub of water and try to find any object that will unatached find any object that will unattached occupy a position that is other than at the surface or at the bottom. There is a long task ahead of you. There is the false theory that the water grows denser as one goes deeper and that a sinking object will find a place where it will remain suspended. #### MODERN CHEMISTRY.

When a mathematical astronomer aris gave a Berlin observatory Paris gave a Berlin observatory a search warrant for a new planet and, turning his telescope as directed, the Berlin observer found the previously unknown planet all the world wondered. Equally remarkable have been a prediction and its verification in the alstory of modern chemistry. Grading the known elements of nature according to the weight of their resecutions. ng to the weight of their respective oms, it was observed that the ele home, it was observed that the ele-ments, some seventy or more in num-ber, formed a scale marked by period icity like the scale in music. This periodic law in the hand of genius be-same an instrument of research. It was in 1871 that Mendeleef, the Rus-siun chemist. In forming the scale of sian chemist, in forming the scale of elements, found it necessary to leave three spaces vacant for undiscovered three spaces vacant for undiscovered slements to make his table true. Neither did he hesitate to predict the properties which these elements should possess when discovered. It was as if an astrologer should inform you that you would meet some time in your life three men and that with the atmost particularity he told you their atmost particularity he told you their respective physical weights, the color of their hair, the size of hat, shoe and of their hair, the size of hat, shoe and glove worn by each and, in a word, all the habits of mind and body sufficient to discriminate them positively from all other men. Not only was the prediction literally fulfilled, but Mendeleef had the unexpected pleasure to see the verification in his day, for out of the night of the unknown one after another came the predicted elements into the clear sunlight of science and were instantly recognized.—Louis-

Upon a mountain in Andalusia quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Whenever there is a heavy mist and persons are ascending the mountain they appear in all their ghostly splendor and sometimes so suddenly as to strike dismay into the hearts of those who see them for the first time. Of course it is all a trick played by the sun. When a mist partially shrouds the mountain the sun is naturally obscured, and then he revenges himself by projecting the shadow of himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain until it assumes the form of of a gigantic specter.

An insect Gunner.

Many insects have some means of defense from their natural enemies. one of which is more curious than that of a small beetle, which, whe that of a small beetle, which, when closely pursued, discharges a puff of poisonous vapor with a distinct detonation. Undoubtedly in many instances this aids the diminuitve gunner in his escape, mainly, in all probability, by startling his pursuer and causing him to abanadon the chase. In the central part of the Crow val-In the central part of the Crow valley was one of those villages that spring up mushroom-like upon the discovery of gold. Newcomers were arriving from the east and from the west. Among those from the west was a man who seemed to have examped on his countenance "I have experienced a grief." He had no sooner entered the town than he walked through the street—there was only one street—looking at every one he met as though he were searching for some one. He kept this up until he seemed to be sat isfied that he had seen every one in isfied that he had seen every one in the town, then discontinued it.

He was a very uncommunicative man and made no friends. His name was not forthcoming, so he soon ac-quired the soubriquet of Stranger. He entered a claim and went to work with entered-a claim and went to work with pick and shovel like the rest of the men in the town. When the daily coach arrived from the east he was al-ways on band. He scrutinized every person who alighted, and when the coach had been emptied walked away. "Who is he and who's he lookin' for?" asked one of a knot of men one evening as Stranger walked away from

When he fust come vere I tuk notice he satisfied himself afore he settled down that there wasn't no one yere as knowed him; then he entered his claim an' went to work. He ain't tellin' nothin about himself. He ain't a-goin' to furnish nobody who's huntin' him with information about where he is."

These are but a few of the reasons conjured up for Stranger's presence in the town and his singular actions. The only person who was not interested fied himself afore he settled down that

"So's your man that Stranger's looking for."

A month passed, and the excitement over the mystery was subsiding when stranger received another letter. This time the postmaster reported that the recipient had left the room before opening his letter, so that it was impossible to tell how, whatever intelligence it contained, it affected him. Great dissatisfaction greeted this announcement, and a plan for putting in a woman postmaster that had falled was revived. However, nothing could be done to accuire information in the Six species of plants that possess window cleaves have been discovered in South Africa. They are all stem-less succulents, and the egg shaped leaves are imbedded in the ground, only the apices remaining visible. The visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface and color-less, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. "That's all," said my companion "You have seen them and are guarded against them."

The same evening just before dark I went on deck. The man with the sandy mustache was lounging about and, presently coming up to me, asked if I could tell him the day's run for the ship. With this as an opening wedge he entered upon a conversation with me, turning it upon some curious phenomena of the sea. He mentioned the phosphorescent light in the wake of a ship, saying: "It's very pronounction tonight. Just come back with me; I'll show it to you."

I told him that I had often seen what he referred to and, bidding him good evening, went below.

It was very plain to me that the woman's story was true. From this time forward I had perfect confidence in her. She did not ask me the nature forward I had perfect confidence in her. She did not ask me the nature of my mission or show any curlosity about it. I argued that if she was desirous of possessing herself of the diamond she would sooner or later lead me to speak of it in the hope that I would tell her where it was. But while she sought my confidence in other ways she never referred to the object of my journey. I told her that I was going home to a sweetheart I had not seen in three years, and the sympathy she gave me was delightful. She seemed to appreciate perfectly the feelings of a young man deeply in love. So interested was she in this that I told her I would bring my fiancee to see her after reaching port, and she was good enough to assure me that she would be delighted to know her.

It was after this refreshing conversation, in order to show some appreciation of her interest in me, that I said to her. answer cold a source of the family for a slight atlanear to assure me that she little girl's home to attend another word with source to see and be delighted to know her. Talking to the Doctor.

While making some professional calls in a sparsely settled district I came upon a little plump, rosy cheeked girl trudging toward home with her slate and dinner pail in her hand. I asked her to ride with me. I could see that she was a very timid child, and efforts to engage her in conversation were unavailing. She would meekly answer "Yes" or "No," but not another word would she speak.

A few weeks later I was called to the little girl's home to attend another member of the family for a slight allment. When about to leave the mother spoke up smillingly and said: "Do

Marie Antoinette Was Murdered or Died or Was Spirited Away is an Enigma Without a Solution.

Every healthy minded man or wom-an loves a mystery, and, fortunately for the world, history has provided one or two problems which have been worn threadbare without revealing their secrets. Among these is the fate of the olne-year-old son of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, which Mme. Louise Latour resently dealt with in a lecture in London. A child judicially murdered or else spirited away, another substituted for

After this all remains obscure except that while the boy was in their care the Simons gave up their post—in itself rather strange, as it was a lucrative one—and on the day of the change of residence the substitution is supposed to have taken place. In the evening a child in bed was shown to the emissaries of the convention, and the next morning he was removed to a emissaries of the convention, and the next morning he was removed to a smaller room with the door nailed up, the only air coming in by the grille through which his food was passed. So he remained until he became so ill that Dr. Dessault, who had often been to Versailles in the old days, was summoned to attend him and was amazed to find a scrofulous and dying boy. "Ce n'est pas le petit dauphin!" ("That is not the little Dauphin!") he blurted out imprudently, and a day or

("That is not the little Dauphin!") he blurted out imprudently, and a day or two later he died by poison.

Other doctors were brought who were unacquainted with the royal chil-dren, and the child died and was bur-ied in his assumed character. He is generally supposed to have been a lad called Gombeau, and his mother was actually seen by people in America actually seen by people in America, where she admitted the wickedness of where she admitted the wickedness of having sold her dying son when she was in a condition of extreme poverty. La femme Simon talked, but her words were discredited by the authorities, who declared she was drunken and garrulous. Nevertheless, on her deathbed she confessed to a priest and a nurse that a substitute had been put in the dauphin's place.

Such are the historical facts as related by Mme. Latour, and to account for them two theories have been deduced, says a writer in the London Times. The first, in which Mme. La-Times. The first, in which Mme. Latour believes, was that the dauphin was judicially murdered by Simon in the temple and the dying Gombeau put in his place to hide the crime from the world. Of the second, that the child escaped alive from his prison, many people are strenuous supporters. Some of them describe the course of events thus: Gombeau was brought into the temple on the day of the deinto the temple on the day of the demenagement in a large cardboard horse given ostensibly as a souvenir to the royal prisoner by the femme 81-mon, while the dauphin was carried out by the woman in a big basket of dirty linen. Others declare that the prince was actually kept hidden in a garret in the temple until the substi-tute died, more than a year later, when he was taken out in a cofin with a false bottom, the body of Gombeau being buried in the moat. This theory has had two startling horse given ostensibly as a souvenir to America has been freely parceled out in gifts since Columbus first set eyes upon the new world. Most of the Unit-ed States territory has been at some time or other handed over to public and private companies. New York, for example, fifty years after it had been sold for something like $25 was pre-sented with other lands to the Duke of York by his brother, the king, and the name of the city is a witness this day to that transaction. The duke granted New Jersey to somebody else, and a few years before the king had carved out Maryland for Lord Baltimore.

The story of Colonel Taibot at the beginning of the last century is one of the romances of Canadian history. The colonel went out in 1793 as an ald-de-camp to the governor, and the founding of a colony became the ruling passion of his life. He was given 100,000 acres, which grew later to 650,000, on condition that he place a settler on every 200 acres. Today this territory is occupied by some of the most flourishing towns in the Dominion, and at the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign Colonel Talbot, who was then still liv-ing, was the recognized chief of twenty-eight towns, all of which had been given to him years before as unoccupied land.

The experts, so called, who have been investigating the various state departments, seem to have discovered that the business of the commonwealth has been honestly and economically carried on. Up to the present time, no instance of dishonest con-duct on the part of state officials in the different departments has been discovered. This is the higest praise that could be given by any investigator. It may be possible that in some instances a more elaborate system of bookkeeping might have been adopted without injury to the common wealth. However, no system of book-keeping will make an official honest, keeping will make an official honest, and it is much better to have an hon-est man with a simple method of bookkeeping than a dishonest one with the most elaborate system in the Governor Foss desired to make thorough investigation of the different state departments in order to ascer-tain if they were being systematically tain if they were being systematically and economically conducted. His chief expert has been Harvey S. Chase, who has posed as statistician and expert accountant and expert in city and state government. Mr. Chase, last week, did not make a very good showing at a hearing before the legislative committee on ways and means. He was there to explain his report on the state treasury depart-ment, and after he had attempted to do so State Treasurer Elmer A. He claimed tha the report of Mr. Chase is contra dictory from start to finish, and tha in all cases where he gives charts to show the operation of the system he recommends, they are exactly op-posite to his actual recommendations. In addition to that, he showed by various citations from the statutes that Mr. Chase's method of figuring

The votes against it were all Republican, and the votes in favor of it were all Demo-cratic. As a matter of fact, it is very doubtful whether the state as a whole yould favor this tax. Massachusett already provides for a tax on all in-comes above $2000 derived from a pro-fession, trade or employment accruing to the person to be taxed during the year ending on the first day of May in the year in which the tax is asses but incomes derived from property al-ready taxed are not included for such taxation. It has been the theory of those opposed to this tax that a federal come tax would take away from thi income tax would take away from the commonwealth a source of incom which is considerable and greatly need ed; in fact, that it would infringe upon the right of the commonwealth to con-tinue a method of taxation which has tinue a method of taxation which has been in vogue for many years. There has never been any disposition to op-pose a federal income tax in case of war or any other great national emer-gency, but the incomt tax proposed would give the nation a right would give the nation a right to levy an income tax whether such emer-gency existed or not. The common-wealth needs all the revenue it has, and those who favor a federal tax would take it from the state and give it to the nation. It is a matter of fact that a half a dozen states would pay a majority of this tax, and Massachu-setts is one of the number. It would take a very large amount of money out of the commonwealth and devote out of the commonwealth and devote out of the commonwealth and devo it for the benefit of all the

BANKS "LOAN" MONEY.

They Don't "Lend" It, Because It Is a Business Transaction.
Why is it banking houses always
"loan" their huge sums of money, never by any chance "lend" them?
"Lend" is the true verb, while "loan" was exclusively the noun. How came it about that "to loan" has uniformly supplanted "to lend?"
The purists make a great fuss about Business Transaction.

The purists make a great fuss abou that Mr. Chase's method of figuring the sinking funds is absolutely illegal, and that his idea of spreading the premiums from the sale of bonds to all funds was pure nonsense. Some of these funds concerned a metropolitan district consisting of twenty, others, of a district consisting of thirty-nine, and still others consisting of forty-one cities and towns. To spread the premiums received from bonds issued in behalf of one of these districts to the funds issued in behalf of another would be gross injustice to the districts themselves.

Treasurer Stevens also showed that Chase's method for handling forty-year sinking funds would cause them to mature in twenty-five years instead of forty, and charged that the expert's plan exhibited gross mathematical ignorance.

Nowadays, by devices of credit and rapid intercommunication, it is kept rapid intercommunication, it is kept constantly working in productive enterprises. Immense loans are made, no longer to relieve the necessitous and the improvident, but to stimulate industry and to enable the borrower as well as the loaner to reap a profit in his transactions. #### BONES OF THE EAR.

The Little Stirrup When Displaced Causes Noises In the Head. Vibrations of the eardrum are com unicated to the inner ear by means of three exceedingly small bones, on of which is called the stirrup. When this particular little bone is displaced, this particular little bone is displaced, however slightly, the patient hears sounds which are subjective, or, to use plainer terms, noises confined exclusively to the auditory apparatus and not heard by others. These sounds frequently seem like wind whistling through a crevice or a buzzlag such as one hears when passing under a network of wires on a windy day. Other sounds of similar subjective origin are classified as musical. They take the lassified as musical. They take the form of ringing bells, trumpet blasts rgan notes and the piping of birds organ notes and the piping of birds. Still another form conveys to the patient sounds such as frogs make as they sit on logs and like the shouts of a crowd at a baseball game.

Dr. Marage, a famous French aurist, recently laid before the Academy of Sciences in Parls the results of his study of a thousand cases of this general sort. He has found that the nerves of the ear in certain cases maintained the conducting position which they assumed when they transmitted the sound of a ringing beli or like sound, and, like an electric button out of sound of a ringing bell or like sound, and, like an electric button out of position, kept the bell vibrations from being interrupted. Other sounds were produced by the persistent excitation of the auditory nerve centers. High frequency electrical currents and vibratory massage have been used by leading specialists in the treatment of ear troubles in these several conditions, and the results have been encouraging. and the results have been encouraging.

LIFE OF THE WORLD.

Traditions That It Will Last Only Six Thousand Years.

There is a general and widespread notion, which the curious investigator will find scattered throughout both will find scattered throughout both medleval and modern literature, that the world will last 6,000 years from the date of its creation. An inscription in one of Martin Luther's books reads as follows: "Elijah, the prophet, said that the world had existed 2,000 years before the law was given (from Adam to Moses), would exist 2,000 years under the Mosale law (from Moses to Christo and 2,000 years under Moses to Christo and 2,000 years under Moses to Christ) and 2,000 years under the Christian dispensation, and then it vould be burned.'

would be burned."
In the Etrurian account of the creation (by Suldas) there is a similar tradition, "The Creator spent 6,000 years in creation, and 6,000 more are allotted to the earth."
In the black letter edition of Foxe's "Acts and Monuments" (1632) there is a whole sermon given with the 6,000 year limit of the earth's duration as a text.

Drilled to Perfection.

From drill man gets accustomed to Jeing under any circumstances what has been hammered into his brain time after time till it becomes second nature to him. Charles XII. of Sweden, "the madman of the north" ripped most of Europe up the back again and again because his soldlers were drilled to perfection before he let them take the field at a time when there drilled to perfection before he let them take the field at a time when there was great neglect of drill in other armies. He valued 1,000 well drilled fighters above 10,000 not so well drilled, and, madman or genius, his judgment was vindicated repeatedly in terrible battles. One night Charles XII. was surprised in Poland by an attacking army of 8,000 when his scant force of 600 was sleeping like the dead from the exhaustion of a hard march. Before his outposts and sentinels could be driven in his small band was aroused, mounted, formed in battle line—all in pitchy blackness—and swinging into a flerce charge upon the enemy. ## AMAZING LINGUISTS.

AMAZING LINGUISTS.

A Wonderful Teacher of Spanish and a Master of Arabio.

An amazing incident happened in one of the higher schools in France a few years ago. A certain deputy of great influence went to the minister of public instruction and asked a place as schoolteacher for one of his constituents. The minister said the only place vacant was that of teacher of Spanish. The deputy told his friend this and remarked that it was a pity he did not know Spanish. To which the postulant replied:

"Spanish? Why, Spanish is my specialty! I shall be glad to take the professorship."

So be was appointed.

So be was appointed. He bought a Spanish grammar and began teaching it to his pupils, doing his best to keep a lesson ahead of the class. But it was pretty poor Spanish he was teaching. pretty poor Spanish he was teaching, and he was very well aware of this. Everything went along smoothly, and the end of the term approached when the class was to be examined by a severe and exacting professor from the university. The teacher trembled in his shoes as the dread day drew near. The day came and with it the examining professor. The scared teacher put his class through its paces, painfully conscious that Cervantes would never have recognized as Spanish this language the pupils were speaking. The grim professor listened in impassive silence. Then he asked a few questions and gave the members of the class a few sentences to translate into Span tions and gave the members of the class a few sentences to translate into Spanish. As his pupils answered the teacher felt that he might as well hand in his resignation. But when all was over the professor congratulated him on his success and the class and the rapid progress it had made.

The professor did not know a word of Spanish!

AMERICA VESPUCCI.

She Asked Congress For Citizenship and "a Corner of Land."

and "a Corner of Land."

A decided sensation was created at Washington during the Van Buren administration by the appearance there of a handsome and well dressed Italian woman who called herself America Vespucci and claimed descent from the navigator who gave his name to the continent. Ex-President Adams and Daniel Webster became her especial friends, and she soon was a welcome guest in the best society. In a few guest in the best society. In a few weeks after her arrival she presented a petition to congress asking, first, to be admitted to the rights of citizenship and, secondly, to be given "a corner of land" out of the public domain of the country which bore the name of her ancestor. An adverse report, which soon was made, is one of the curiosities of congressional literature. It enjoyized the petitioner as "a young, dignified and graceful lady with a mind of the highest intellectual culture and a heart beating with all our own enthunest in the best society. The primary impulse of all creatures is possession. It is this that causes a chicken to tear around the yard with a piece of meat in its mouth and all the other chickens after it. Of course it cannot possibly eat the meat. It hasn't time, but the instinct of possession makes it grab and keep it. The same is noticeable among beasts. Thus ame is noticeable among beasts. Barly on the evening of the eleventh day of the present month I was at a neighboring house in this village. Several people of both sexes were assembled in one of the apartments, and three or four others, with myself, were in another. At last came in a little elderly gentleman, pale, thin, with a solemn countenance, pleuritic voice, hooked nose and bollow eyes. It was not long before we were summoned to attend in the apartment where he and the rest of the company were gathered. We went in and took our seats. The little elderly gentleman with the hook nose prayed, and we all stood up. When he had finished most of us sat down. The gentleman with the hooked nose then muttered certain cabalistic expressions, which I was too much frightened to remember, but I recollect that at the conclusion I was given to understand that I was married to a young lady of the name of Frances Fairchild, whom I perceived standing by my side and whom I hope in the course of a few months to have the pleasure of introducing to you as your daughter-in-law, which is a matter of some interest to the poor girl, who has neither father nor mother in the some interest to the poor girl, who has neither father nor mother in the world."

The room was unoccupied save for that strangely unconscious form in the window. Lucien never forgot the quiet siegance of the room, with its rich rugs and tapestried walls, it's air of homelike comfort.

It took but an instant to tear down the lace drapertes and to trample them under foot. Then he was free to take the form of the lady of the alabaster hand in his arms and carry her to a place of safety.

"Good heavens, madam?" he breathed in her ear as he attempted to draw

A low, delicious trill of laughter broke his momentary hesitation. It did not come from the lady in his arms, but from the girl who had followed him into the room.

He turned and looked at her. She was small and slight, with a pale face crowned with bronze brown hair, but her face was lovely and her eyes the softest brown. She wore the most charming gown of brown velvet that matched her eyes exactly. She was dimpling with laughter when he turned, and she tried to stiffen her features into solemnity as their eyes met.

"I hope you will pardon me—I am so sorry," she faitered. "You have been so very kind and brave to put out the fire, but if you had not said madam' it would not seem so funny. Oh, dear!" Again she rippled into laughter.

Lucien looked down at the form he was holding so stiffly in his arms. His eyes widened with amazement, and a sheepish grin overspread his face.

The drops drummed on his umbrella and pattered against the smooth surface of his mackintosh. Once or twice he poked hished out from under the umbrella to take a survey of his surroundings. On the second occasion he saw it and stopped short in his tracks to stare up at a lighted parlor window.

Lucien Braddock had heard of beautiful hands, he had read in novels of "marble brows" and "alabaster hands and arms," but in the course of his prosale existence he had never come across these marks of feminine loveliness. He had seen pretty hands. Some were white, and others were tanned with summer sunshine, but never had he seen a woman's hand that might be likened to the alabaster ones of his novel reading days.

Fext of the Lesson, Isa. vi, 1-13. Memory Verses, 6-8—Golden Text, Isa. vi, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We saw in last week's lesson that Uzziah, king of Judah, was evidently much helped by a prophet named Zechariah, who had visions of God. And now we see in this lesson that Isaiah received his commission in connection with a vision of God. It was wrote the prophecy called by his name; also with Moses and Joshua and Gid-eon. Daniel also had a vision of God, and it was not until Job could say and it was not until Job could say "Now mine eye seeth thee" that he re-ceived fullness of blessing. There is no vision of God or knowledge of God except through the Son of God, whom we know as Jesus Christ our Lord. No we know as Jesus Christ our Lord. No man knoweth the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him. No man cometh unto the Father but by Me. He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father (Matt. xi, 27; John xiv, 6, 9). We are not fully qualified for service until we have so seen God in Christ that no mortal man is big enough to come between Him and our soul's vision. The Lord alone must be seen and exalted, and we must be seen and exalted, and we must cease from man (Isa, ii, 11, 17

In the year that King Uzziah died In the year that King Uzziah died Isaiah saw a throne and a king who liveth forever, who said to John in Patmos, "I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore" (Rev. i, 18). This same John, quoting from our lesson chapter and referring to this vision, said, "These things said Isaiah when he saw His glory and spoke of Him" (John xii, 41). Notice that the one whom Isaiah saw on the throne is called Lord (capital L. small ord), not the same as LORD in verses 3, 5, 12, where the name is all capitals. The former is "Adonai," my master, my proprietor, the one who owns me, whereas the latter is "Jebovah," the great "I am," who was and is and is to be the Creator as my Redeemer. If any mortal man owns us and he dies we may be in sore distress, but if the one whose we are and whom we serve is the ever living man on the throne then we will have peace always.

It is a very great lesson to learn to see no man any more save Jesus only with ourselves (Mark ix, 8.) Isaiah saw the seraphim close to the throne, whereas Ezeklei and John saw cherulain (Ezek. and Rev. iv, with Ezek. In the year that King Uzziah died Isalah saw a throne and a king who liveth forever, who said to John in Patmos, "I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore" (Rev. 1, 18). Notice that the one whom Isalah saw on the throne is called Lord (capital L. small ord), not the feet our walk, what we do, but our only comfort is in what He is and what He does.

The effect of this vision of the glory of the Lord upon the prophet was that he saw himself as wholly undone and unclean. This is what we need—such a vision of the beauty of the Lord that we shall forever hate and abhor ourselves an sinners in His sight, according to Isa. Ixiv, 6; Dan. x, 8; Rom. vii, 18; 3-19. Thus seeing ourselves we shall have no con-fest in these mortal bodies.

We have only to yield and obey. The power is His, and the life is His, and the message is His, and He will take care of the results, and we are assured that He will not fail nor be discouraged (Isa. xtil. 4). It is ours to receive the message from Himself, receive His words in our hearts and then in His name "Go tell" (verse 9; Ezek. iii, 10, 11, 17). In the closing verses of the chapter the prophet was erses of the chapter the prophet was told that the message would not be re ceived. So it was with Jeremiah and Ezekiel. They were warned that their messages would provoke great opposition, but they were to speak whether men would hear or not. See also Matt x. 16-18; John xv, 18, 19.

The Bear He Missed.

Telling in his book of some hunting experiences near the north pole, Captain Sverdrup wrote: "Walruses and seals were harpooned and shot and also the large arctic hare, which seems to have contracted the peculiar habit of frequently running long distances on its hind legs. Hunting was not always easy, the atmosphere playing strange tricks with the eyesight, as witness the following account of the stalking of a bear: 'With the utmost caution, with his gun ready and his eye fixed inexorably on the bear, Seriel eye fixed inexorably on the bear, Seriel eye fixed inexorably on the bear, Seriel advanced to the spot. Meanwhile the bear sat wagging its head, but keeping a good lookout, it appeared, for when Sehlel had come some twenty steps nearer it rose and flew away. It flew as well as any bird, which, after all, was not remarkable, for it was a glaucous guil!"

His Wife Wasn't Flattering.

A suburbanite but lately married went out to post a letter, and as the lamps had not been lit in the road in which he dwelt he could only dimigrate his way. A short distance up the road he met, as he thought, his wife, who had been out to tea, and as he went past he just whispered:

"All right, my dear; I shall be with you in a minute."

Immediately after he had said these words he saw the lady turn a startled look upon him and then hurry away, and the horrible iden occurred to him that it was not his wife and and that in the darkness he had made a mistin the darkness he had made a

I therefore went to one of the hotels on the summit, hoping to recover my lost nervous vigor. I had not been there a week before I met with a great surprise. Walking out one afternoon, I met a girl coming toward me, and when we met who should it be but Dolores Sierra. Cut off as I had been for more than

But what has that to do with your coming to America?"
"To meet one in the flesh whom you have supposed to be dead you must admit is liable to cause a shock," she replied without noticing my question.
"But"—

"Come; let us walk together." "Come; let us walk together."

By slow degrees she brought out that she had come to America because there are fields open to women in which they may make their living. She had no dowry, and in Spain a dowry was neessary to marriage; therefore she preferred to be occupied among those of her own sex who were used to work and where there was work to do. and where there was work to do. "There is no work to do up in these mountains," I said. The question took her unawares.

That her presence in America was not explained by anything she had told me I did not doubt. But what was her I did not doubt. But what was her object in coming? As we walked on I probed the matter, wondering all the while at the strange occurrence. Then suddenly a theory suggested itself to me. Might she not have come to protect me? And would she have come all the way across an ocean on my account except for one reason—that she loved me?

But such a suspicion I was not in-but, as before, I retrained from speak ing of it.

One night I awoke with a start.
The moon, shining in at the window, showed a woman's figure standing near. She held something in one hand, while with the forefinger of the hand, while with the foreinger of the other she was smearing what she held. Then suddenly she flung the article out of the window. A ray of moonlight struck it and revealed what I took to be a knife.

I rose, supporting myself on my elbow, and asked;
"Who's there?"

A hand grasped mine—a hand cold as ice.

wonderful extent the flow of blood to any particular part of the body. The following experiment has been tried as many as ten times by me and has not falled once.

When the nose starts to bleed, immediately persuade yourself to believe that you are running with all your might up the steepest flight of steps you can think of or up a high hill; that is, just think of doing either of these things and doing it fast. Think at the same time that you are carrying a heavy piece of baggage with both hands and add thoughts of any other bodily exertion. You will be suras ice.
"Hush! I am Dolores."
"What are you doing here?"
"Don't interrupt me while I tell you and what to do. Our lives depend upon it. I came to America ordered by the circle to kill you. A woman was sent with me to see that I did the work. She is the Sealth woman was was sent with me to see that I did the work. She is the Spanish woman we met. Tonight I told her that I would come to your room, plunge a dagger into your heart and throw the dagger out of the window to prove to her that I have done the deed. I have smeared it with beef's blood. She is to leave by one route, I by another; she by the stony clove and I by the clove leading down eastward. Goodby!" prised at the quickness with which your trouble ends.

The explanation is that when we really start to run more blood is given to the arteries supplying the muscles of the legs than they were receiving while at rest. This has been proved. As the same thoughts in the mind produce approximately the same bodily effects. If one merely thinks to run, but does not run, the blood will go to the legs anyhow and away from the

Tom Osborne, the bookseller, was one of "that mercantile rugged race to which the delicacy of the poet is sometimes exposed."

Osborne, irritated by what he thought an unnecessary delay on the part of Johnson, went one day into the room where Johnson was sitting and abused him in the most liberal manner. Johnson heard him some time unmoved, but at last, losing all patience, he selzed a huge folio and, aiming a blow at the bookseller's head, succeeded in sending him sprawling to the floor. Osborne alarmed the family by his cries, but Johnson, placing his foot on his breast, would not let him stir until he had exposed him in that situauntil he had exposed him in that situa-tion and then left him with this tri-umphant expression: "Lie there, thou son of duliness, ignorance and obscur-

No Room For Him.

Several relics of exceptional value and of unusual interest to archaeologists were discovered in a small town near Nuremberg, and as soon as the news reached him the director of the Nuremberg Historical museum went to the village and introduced himself to the mayor, saying:

"I am in charge of the museum at Nuremberg, and I'd like to"—

"You're too late, my good sir," interrupted the mayor, "We've already got here several merry-go-rounds, a bearded woman, a theatrical company composed of apes, a troupe of trained dogs and a band of Hungarian musicians, so you can readily see that we've got no room for your museum."

And with these words he nodded to the director and went away.

The Society continued to occupy this Church until 1828 when it was aban-loned, and used for other purposes. The church began to feel that it would be of benefit to them to change the location of their edifice to a lot of land more central and convenient, and a movement to that end began early in 1827. The First Cong. Church was not very favorable to the change about to be made and manifested their disapproval. However a lot was selected that was owned by a New Hampshire gentleman, and Capt. Samuel Abbott was commissioned to measure the lot at midnight and having made a plan proceeded to New Hampshire with it accompanied by his associates, and concluded the purchase. When it became known that the land had been so cured for Church purposes, the First Church was greatly surprised and chagrined, and the ill feeling between the two Societies became more pronounced than ever.

Capt. Abbott had the charge of erecting the building he finding that the width of the land was not sufficient for the proposed building, a gentleman owning land adjoining prasented that afternoon at 3 o'clock at Mr. Parker's been to hold the moths in check, and in some cases even this has not been achieved."

When its Managers selected June 17, 1911, Bunker Hill Day, for the second appearance in this city of the "County Circus" they probably disremembered the fact that June 17 belongs exclusively to Charlestown for an annual holiday as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought in that town on June 17, 175; that decays as calls and solves and Brooks.

Water Scarce! Pressure Low

Great Danger to Property-Farm Stock Suffers and Many Families are Inconvenienced.

The remarkable scarcity of water late last fall, and, indeed, throughout the winter, has made the conditions this spring unusually dangerous so far as the safety of property is concerned, and has already brought great discomfort to stock, and, indeed, the households throughout the suburban territory of Greater Boston. Everywhere comment is made that this is "a very dry of course, in the Metropolitan district it is usually expected that, with the enormous water system under the supervision of the Metropolitan Water Board, there is an ample supply for every possible use within the district. The Metropolitan Water Board claims there is enough water on hand for two years. It behooves people to be careful, however, and not waste the supply.

For those people who are not on the Metropolitan Water System, difficulties are already presenting themselves, and many are facing real suffering. Real suffering does not necessarily begin only when one has not enough water to Mrink; it may easily be experienced when there is not enough for the ordinary routine necessities of the home and farm or residence property.

ELECTRIC PUMPING OF WATER SUPPLY.

Even within the limits of the Metropolitan Water System people use electrically operated, automatic pumping outfits to maintain an even pressure in their residences and outbuildings at all times. This electric service for automatically controlling the water supply and pressure is very easily installed, is absolutely reliable and one need never worry whether the wind is going to blow and turn the windmill or whether any other pumping arrangement is going to act as it should—the electric motor is always on the job. It operates the pump to maintain water at a certain fixed level, and when the water supply falls below that level the motor starts the pump automatically.

that level the motor starts the pump automatically.

These electric motor pumping systems can be easily and cheaply installed they are compact and absolutely certain in their operation

BOSTON CHARTER UNCHANGED

egislature Moves to Investigate Dividend Cut-Governor Foss Cuts Deep Into Appropriations For State Schools-Expert Disagrees With the

One of the most far-reaching schemes for the development of the port of Boston has been outlined in bill providing for the appointment of three directors of the port. Under this measure an issue of state bonds to the amount of the power of the port. Under this measure an issue of state bonds to the amount of the power of the pow $5,000,000 is authorized to consummate this development. The chairman of the directors of the port is to receive $15,000 and the other two members $10,000 each. The directors are authorized to proceed with a comprehensive plan for development and given charge of all lands and rights owned by the commonwealth on or adjacent to the harbor front. The powers and duties of the harbor commissioners are transferred to this power of directors. The directors are $9,000,000 is authorized to consumboard of directors. The directors are authorized to take property by right of eminent domain, to build piers and or emment connections for any railroads now here or to come here, to equip the piers with all modern apparatus, to acquire lighters or other vessels needed. These directors may make leases of piers, locations, etc., for a period not to exceed ten years with a right to renewal on readjust-and a dry dock to accommodate the largest ocean steamers and submit largest ocean steamers and submitted to the legislature of 1912; to secure from Boston free conveyance of the city's right and title to Apple island and other property. Provision is made that all authority and licenses persons or corporations granted since 1865 shall cease or be forfeited through non-user. The directors are authorized to employ engineers and assistants subject to civil service rules. An appropriation of $50,000 is carried in the measure to pay the salaries and expenses of the directors n the present year.

For a long time much has been said bout the development of the port of about the development of the port of Boston. It has been talked of so long in a theoretical way that a practical move toward such development seems to have come as a complete surprise to the vast majority of people. New England was once one of the greatest shipping sections of the country. There seems to be no reason why she should not again fill a larger place as should not again fill a larger place as a shipping center.

Charter Amendments Killed The senate has killed the bill to amend the Boston city charter. There was a tremendous fight over this measure and it had the support of the Democratic machine and some of the Republican members. It passed the house by a substantial majority, but immediately afterwards those who wished to see the present charter given a longer time to prove its worth $1.25 Per Thousand Cubic Feet

Cubic Feet

Cubic Feet

Thousand Cu and it was also lought by all the city reform agencies and to good effect. Representative Martin Lomasney has been the prime mover in the fight to amend the charter. He early solidi-fied the Democratic members with few exceptions and won over a good num ber of Republicans. This was com-paratively easy in the house but when it came to the senate public sentiment got in its work and it was defeated by an overwhelming majority. Probably if the vote had been taken several weeks ago, it would have been comparatively close.

The Old Order Changeth The days of radicalism seem to be Sunday morning at service the con gregation sang the old familiar hymn there. An order has been passed by the Massachusetts house providing for an investigation by the railroad comission of the recent cut in the Bos ton and Maine dividend from 6 per-cent to 4 percent. Ten years ago such action by the legislature would have been looked upon as rank Socialism. can hardly be wondered at that the managers of public service corpora-tions claim they do not know where they are standing when they are un-der the control of so many regulat-ing agencies. The railroads are amenable to the interstate commerce mmission, the state board of rail road commissioners and the legisla-ture. There are also numerous boards of trade and other agencies which from time to time feel the necessity of aiding along the same line. As or member of the legislature stated the other day, this seems to be a time of general distrust. No one seems to have any confidence in the work being done by public service commis sioners or in the good intentions or those who have the direct management of public service corporations. Ac-cording to the view of this legislator, such a feeling is destructive of highest

Governor Foss Pares School Fund Governor Foss has pared the appro-priations for state schools, including the industrial school for boys, Lyman the industrial school for boys, Lyman school for boys and state industrial school for girls. He approved the regular maintenance appropriation of $18,150 for the industrial school for boys, but disapproved all but $10,000 of $124,285 asked for for central power light and heating plant, and for a new cottage to accommodate thirty boys.

We were seated in front of a Bedonin chief's tent, our two baby camels en Joying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death in spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fitting allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a reduct botter which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

If we had not won that battle we would have needed no lines of retreat. It was from our lines of retreat. It was, from our standpoint, victory or annihilation. The only preparation necessary for the contingency of defeat at Buena Vista was that we should write our MAN AND THE WORLD.

China's Floating Islands.
On all the great lakes of China are found floating islands, which are enormous rafts of bamboo overlaid with earth and bearing on the surface of the water pretty houses and gardens. They are, in fact, aquatic farms, bearing crops of rice and vegetables. The rich bottom mud, utilized as an artificial soil, is extremely fertile and yields rich bottom mud, utilized as an artificial soil, is extremely fertile and yields bountiful harvests, though on a small scale. In a country where there is a lack of available land the floating plantations are most serviceable, large sails being attached to the dwelling house as well as to each corner of the island whenever it is desired to move about. After gathering a crop of grain or garden produce from his farm the floating farmer casts his nets into the water and from their depths brings up a supply of fish for his family.

I took John Forster down to see the Hogarths, whereupon he actually said that he would and must have them himself and as he had not £5 of loose money at that moment I should lend that sum to him. I pointed out the absurdity of the position—that I wanted the engravings for tion-that I wanted the engravings for myself and could not afford to lay out the mone; how, then, could I lend it-to him? It was of no use. He over ruled me, had the £5 of me and bough the Hogarths I was longing for."

Wrecked by a Knife Blade.

A ship was once wrecked on the Irish const. The captain was a careful one. Nor had the weather been of so severe a kind as to explain the wide distance which the vessel had swerved from her proper course. The ship went down, but so much interest attached to the disaster that a diving bell was sunk. Among other portions of the vessel that were examined was the compass that was swung on the deck, and inside the compass box was detected a bit of steel, which appeared to be the small point of a pocket-knife blade. It was learned that the day before the wreck a sallor who had been set cleaning the compass had used his pocket knife in the process and had unceremoniously broken off the point and left it remaining in the box. That bit of knife blade exerted its influence on the compass and to a degree that deflected the needle from its proper bent and vitiated it as an index of the ship's direction. That bit of knife blade wrecked the vessel. D. M. Stearns. of the first verse, "A song of the Vine-

Manhattan Scallop.

A delicious breakfast or luncheon dish is Manhattan scallop. Shred sufficient cold cooked fish to measure a good half pint. It must be free from skin and bone. Add to it one cupful of fine state breadcrumbs, a good seasoning of sait and pepper, two well beaten eggs mixed with a half cupful of stewed tomatoes. Turn all into a buttered dish, sprinkle the top with buttered dish, sprinkle the top with butter and brown in a hot oven.—Suburbanite.

Lesson VIII .- Second Quarter. For May 21, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. v. 1-12-Mem ory Verse, 11—Golden Text, Isa. v, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev. Our lesson title, "Song of the Vine

ved touching his vineyard" loved touching his vineyard." In Ezek, xv we learn that the only use of the vine is to bear fruit, and, failing in that, it is good for nothing. In John xv we learn that fruitless branches are gathered by men and burned, like the salt which has no savor and is good for nothing but to be trodden underfoot of men (Matt. v. 12). Verse 7 of our lesson tells us that the

Verse 7 of our lesson tells us that the house of Israel is the Lord's vineyard here referred to and the men of Judah His pleasant plant, but instead of producing the desired fruit they were yielding only wild grapes, described in the sixfold wee of the chapter and in the sixfold wee of the chapter and in flos. x, 1, as an empty vine bringing forth fruit unto himself. According to the six week they were the six wer to the six woes, they were mighty to drink wine, enjoy pleasures, gather property, call things by their wrong names and sin.

He brought them out of Egypt, cast He brought them out of Egypt, cast out the nations before them and planted them in a good land, but because of their sin He had to them His face from them, and their only hope was in the man of His right hand, the son of man strong for God (Ps. lxxx, 8-19). According to our lesson, He had done everything for them that could be done for a vineyard, but as in the parable of Matt. xxl. 33-41, they beat and of Matt. xxi, 33-41, they beat and silled His servants and even the heir o the vineyard also. According to our to the vineyard also. According to our lesson chapter, they regard not the work of the Lord nor consider the operation of His hands, but cast away the law of the Lord of hosts and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel (verses 12-24).

His pitiful cry over them is always the same, whether through the prophets or through His Son. "I am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, Open thy mouth of the land of Egypt, Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it, but My people would not harken to My voice, and Israel would none of Me" (Ps. lxxxi, 10.11). "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, * * *

Israel would none of Me" (Ps. lxxxi, 10, 11). "O Jerusalem, ••• how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not" (Matt xxiii, 37). Such unbelleving people who turn away from God and His word are said to be "drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink" (Isa. xxix, 9).

It is most interesting to note that in the chapter following our lesson chapter we have a vision of the earth filled with the glory of the Lord. Compare verses 11, 12 and 22 with chapter vi, 3. Better say contrast the drunkenness with the glory. Then note the same contrast in Hab. ii, 14, 15, and Eph. v, 18, and observe that at Pentecost spirit filled people were said to be full of new wine (Acts ii, 4-13). There is no remedy for self righteous, self pleasing, unbelieving people, but such a sight of Jesus Christ dying for their sins as will break their hard hearts and lead them to cry, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." One cannot do and lead them to cry, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." One cannot do this for another, but He who said "I anness you been selected impudently at prisoner stared impudently at constituting the steepographer and winked to it the locked desk where their restations waited Homer Dickson's restations waited Homer Dickson bear fruit. The question of verse 4, "What could have been done more to My vineyard that I have not done in it?" suggests the question for every sinner, drunken or sober, for all have sinned and all are guilty (Rom. ill, 19). What more could the Lord do that He has not done for your salvation? Consider John ill, 16, and answer as to what more is necessary.

If you do not yield to such love and receive Him as your personal Saylour eccive Him as your personal Saviour and then so abide that He may bear and then so ablee that He may bear fruit through you and gather fruit from you it must be true of you that you are despising His word and dis-regarding His great work on your be-half and thus continuing under the wrath of God (John iii, 36).

'Old Hickory's" Caustic Advice to James Buchanan.

Stories of Andrew Jackson are likely to be pointed and to have a practical application, as do the stories told of Franklin. In Mr. J. W. Forney's "Anecdotes of Public Men" there is given a story as it was told by James Buchanan at his own table. Although it contained a reproof from the president to one who was to succeed him, it is said to have been a favorite story at that board.

it is said to have been a favorite story at that board.

Shortly after Mr. Buchanan's return from Russia in 1834, to the court of which country he had been sent by Jackson in 1832, and immediately following his election to the senate he called upon "Old Hickory" with a fair English lady whom he desired to present to the head of the American nation.

sent to the nead of the American nation.

Leaving her in the reception room downstairs, he ascended to the president's private quarters, where he found General Jackson unshaved, unkempt, in his dressing gown, with his slippered feet on the fender, before a blazing wood fire, smoking a corncoble of the old southern pattern.

He stated his object, and General Jackson said that he would be very glad to meet the lady whom Mr. Buchanan desired to present.

Mr. Buchanan was always careful of his personal appearance and in some

Mr. Buchanan was always careful of his personal appearance and in some respects was a sort of masculine Miss Fribbe, addicted to spotless cravats and huge collars, rather proud of a foot small for a man of his large stature and to the last of his life what the ladies would call "a very good figure." Having just returned from a visit to the fashionable circles of the continent after years of thorough intercourse with the etiquette of one of the statellest courts in Europe, he was statellest courts in Europe, he was stateliest courts in Europe, he was somewhat shocked at the idea of the president meeting the eminent English ady in such a guise and ventured to ask if General Jackson did not Inten-

"Buchanan, I want to give you a little piece of advice, which I hope will remember. I knew a man once who made a fortune by attending to his own business. Tell the lady I will see her presently."

The man who became president in 1857 was fond of saying that this remark of Andrew Jackson humiliated him more than any other rebuke he had ever received.

He walked downstairs to meet the lady in his charge, and in a very short time President Jackson entered the

The Old Time Senators.

A recent overhauling of a desk in the office of the District of Columbia health officer brought to light a small volume entitled "The Medical Register of the District," which contained a complete list of the senators of the Thirty-night congress, giving their Thirty-ninth congress, giving their weight, height and head and chest measurements. The author of the book, Dr. J. M. Toner, says in explanation of

"It shows that in all the points ob-served our senators exceed the average of mankind in all parts of the world as well as the average of our own country."

From the figures given it appears that the tallest senators at that time same from Kentucky, the shortest from New Hampshire and West Virginia

What induced Waters to take such a course I can't conceive. I saw at once that Claybourne would take it as an insult which any southerner would consider could not be washed out except in blood. I shall never forget his expression. There was nothing of an tagonism in it; the principal feature was pain. It seemed to me that Waters' shaft struck home. I was sure Claybourne would not do anything that he conceived to be dishonorable, but I feared that he was engaged in something that would tend to injure the Union cause.

a thing of the past. The first quest in something that would tend to injure the Union cause.

"There are only two of you fellows here, besides Waters and myself," said Claybourne, "which is lucky. You must know that no man can charge me with what Waters has charged me without having to fight. We can't fight openly, but there's a way we can fight without being generally known. We can ride out beyond our vedettes, have it out and, returning, report that we've had a brush with the enemy's pickets."

Lieutenant Thorpe and I were the two officers present besides the principals, and we both endeavored to smooth the matter over. Waters said that if Claybourne would explain has absences he would apologize. Claybourne declined to explain and said that such a charge to an officer of the army did not admit of an apology.

Thorpe and I labored all that day to settle the matter amicably, but Claybourne would not explain, and without an explanation Waters would not withdraw his insinuation. There seemed nothing for it but to accept Claybourne's suggestion. I agreed to act for Claybourne, and Thorpe acted for Waters. We all rode out beyond the picket line and, choosing an open space in a wood where we thought we were not likely to be interrupted, were about to dismount for the purpose of settling the dispute when we were fired upon by concealed Confederates. We all rode away in a hurry, heading for our lines. Seeing Claybourne swaying in his saddle, I rode beside him and prevented him failing from from his horse. He was not discharged for several weeks. In fact, he was not discharged at all, for while he was discharged at all, for while he was under treatment an order came for our battallon to move forward and take up a position several miles in advance of the one we had occupied. Claybourne deserted the hospital for active service. We found no enemy between us and our new encampment except small bands, which at once retreated before us.

explanation he had called for had been made to me and that I was perfectly satisfied with it. Waters accepted it as if it had been made to him personally and offered to go to Claybourne and apologize, but I assured him that it was not necessary. All the case required was that the matter be dropped.

Shortly after this I was transferred to another branch of the service and did not meet Claybourne again till we met several years after the war was

PILFERING A BASE

One of the Most Closely Calculated Plays In Baseball.

WORKING A DELAYED STEAL

Anson's Wasted Sacrifice Bunt.

Invented by Harry Stovey, Used to Be Pulled Off by "Big Bill" Lange.

"Base stealing, the gentle art of printing and 'hitting the dirt,' is the finest drawn and most closely calculated play in baseball and the one that, above all others, reveals the mathematical exactitude of the national game," says Hugh S. Fullerton in the American Magazine. "A player who can run eighty-five feet in three and one-third seconds from a flat footed

John made no answer, but appeared and 'Big Bill' Lange, who stole 100 to be looking for something on his times in one season, were all great runners who would be great runners who would be greet under present conditions. I recall vividiy Lange's one hundredth stolen base, which established his record. He was non second base with no one out, and Chicago needed one run to win the game. Anson was at the bat, and, after his stolid, businessike style, he poked down a perfect sacrifice bunt and went lumbering toward first base Major — was wounded and would be unable to perform a certain duty for which he had been suggested. "Wounded!" said old Stonewall Jackson. "It that is really so I think it must have been by an accidental discharge of his duty."

The Prince's Death.
Husband (reading the paper)—I see that Prince Harold is dead. Wife (an Anglomanic, inexpressibly shocked)—Is it really possible? It seems too sad for anything. What was the cause of his death? Husband—He trotted a mile in 2:26¼, and then died of blind staggers.—New York Sun.

Husband (reading the paper)—I see that Prince Harold is dead. Wife (an Anglomanic, inexpressibly shocked)—Is it really possible? It seems too sad for anything. What was the cause of his death? Husband—He trotted a mile in 2:26¼, and then died of blind staggers.—New York Sun. - was wounded and would and trotted back to second. Halfway

Harry Stovey, a wonderful base run-ner of the early days. The theory of the steal is to catch the catcher and the infielder unprepared and out of position, and its success lies entirely in its unexpectedness. "Lange, the leading exponent of the delayed steal, made it after this fashand sprint as hard as he could perhaps twenty eight to thirty-five feet, then stop short, hesitate and act as if he had blundered and intended to try to regain first base. If he succeeded in drawing the throw to first base he proceeded to second at top speed. But in the great majority of cases the catcher would not attempt to throw to either base, but would keep mortoning Future in Years.

Do you ever wonder how long you are going to live? Ask an actuary, the man who figures it all out for the life insurance companies and who can tell with almost supernatural precision.

He'll tell you that if you are 20, and in good health, chances are 12 to 1 that you'll live beyond 30. For longer life he'll offer these odds: To be 40, 5½ to 1; to be 50, 15 to 1; to be 60, 12-3 to 1. But he'll say that you have less than 1 chance in 2½ to be 70, less than 1 in 5½ to be 80 and only 1 chance in 100 to be 90.

Suppose you are 30. Your chances. Suppose you are 30. Your chances run this way: To be 40, 11 to 1; to be 50, 4½ to 1; to be 60, 2½ to 1; to be 70, 4½ chances in 10; to be 80, 1 in 5½; to be 50, 81-3 to 1; to be 60, 2½ to 1; to be 50, 81-3 to 1; to be 60, 2½ to 1; to be 50, 1 in 5½; lobe 50, 5 chances out of 10; to be 80, 1 in 5½; to be 70, 5 chances out of 10; to be 80, 1 in 5½; lobe 70, 1 in 100.

Fifty-year-olds' prospects are figured: To be 60, 4½ to 1; to be 70, about 1½ to 1; to be 80, only 1 in 5; to be 90, 1 in 100.

Say you are 60. It runs this way at that age: To be 70, 2 to 1; to be 80, 1 in 50; to be 90, 1 in 90.

If you are 70 your chances of turn.

If you are 70 your chances of turn sides that, it is much easier or gain a second base than from first, and, besides that, it is much easier to gain a sides that, it is much easier or gain as take more than twice the lead from second base than from first, and, be-sides that, it is much easier to gain a sides that, it is much easier to gain a flying start. It has, however, been declared bad judgment to steal third except in close games with one out and the opposing pitcher going well and preventing hitting. In such cases, where one run will win or tie, stealing third is advised by many. It is more difficult to see the pitcher's movements from behind him than from one side. Still, the runner need not start as quickly, but can start at top speed wife's Mother, of Courself What's the contrary?"

Handy With the Whip.
Teamsters are prouder of their skill with the whip than of anything else in the world. A group of teamsters were talking one night.
"Out on the plains," said one young fellow, "I used to cut down a steer with my whip, skin him and divide up bits careas."

A red headed fellow said his uncle could take two whips and write the Lord's Prayer on the bark of a birch with the left hand one, at the same time playing operatic selections with the other on a tin can at seven paces.

"That's pretty good work," said a veteran, "but my old father used to draw corks with every flick of the lash."

Then a cross eyed stranger spoke up. "Gents," he said, "I know there's men can even hair cut and shave ye with a whip—I know it, for I've seen it done—but the only man that ever found the whip real lucrative was Tom Fallon, from Sag Harbor. Tom with his whip made a real nice little pile." "How so?" the red headed man asked.

"Pickin' pockets," said the stran-ger.—Los Angeles Times.

Queer Decree of Divorce Issued by

A Queer Decree of Divorce Issued by a Paris Court.

Some years ago, it is said, a legal blunder of a most extraordinary character was committed in one of the divorce courts in Paris. By some misapprehension on the part of the presiding judge, whose papers and mind had got confused, he actually mistoos the name of an advocate who had been arguing a petition for the name of the ame of an advocate who had been arguing a petition for the name of one petitioner himself and in granting and signing the decree of dissolution of marriage of the petitioner unwittingly substituted the advocate's name for the petitioner's and thus divorced the lawyer from his wife instead of granting the prayed for release of the advocate's client. As the lawyer had no desire for separation from his wife and as there was no process for annulling an absolute decree for divorce, even to meet such a remarkable case, it became necessary through this judicial error for the man of law to remarry his spouse without delay, and this he did.

A somewhat similar error was com-

A somewhat similar error was committed in the English court of chan mitted in the English court of chancery. There had been a litigation over some property, which was held by one man and claimed by another of the same name. In evading some order of the court the holder of the property had committed a contempt, and on this being called to the attention of the judge an order issued for the summoning, not of the guilty party, but of the claimant of the same surname, and the order, a very severe one, was actually in execution before the error was discovered.—New York Press. liscovered.-New York Press.

BOOKS IN OLD ROME.

Trained Slave Copylsts Turned Them
Out Quick and Cheap.
There were in Augustan Rome established publishing houses which not only turned out large numbers of books, but many editions of them and at an incredibly small price. That their arrangements were businesslike may be inferred from the testimony of Horace. He relates that when an author falled to please the metropolis the publishers shipped the entire edition of his works to the provinces, and tion of his works to the provinces, and if he still failed as a writer they made arrangements to bring them back again and sell them as paper to the pastry and sell them as paper to the pastry and spice shops.

One great firm in Rome had over 2,000 trained slave copyists, and their work was swift and cheap, for Martial writes that they had ready an edition of a thousand copies of his "Epigrams" in just one hour, to be sold at 10 cents a copy. The exceedingly large reading public which all this indicates must have been many years in growing, and one may assume that growing, and one may assume that growing, and one may assume that Rome had long been a city of readers. Atticus, the publisher of Cleero, had a great many modern methods in the conduct of his business, and the fact that Caesar's "Commentaries" were that Caesar's "Commentaries" were very quickly dispatched to the out-posts of civilization shows that the machinery of distribution was also well organized. Thus we may con-clude that the advertising and public-ity department was in good shape.— Bookman.

Husky Dogs of Labrador.

All along the coast at every Eskimo encampment and about the cabins of the liveyeres are numbers of husky dogs. In winter these animals pull the sledges and form the sole means of travel or communication from settlement to settlement. During the summer they are not fed by their owners, but are left to seek their sustenance as best they can; hence the hungry brutes range the land near the coast and add to the problems of Labrador, as they permit no creature to live that they can pull down. If a horse were to be turned out to grass overnight only its bare bones would be found in the morning. Even to human beings they are sometimes dangerous when night begins to fall, and on occasion when hard driven by hunger they have been known to attack children in the day. Considering they are hardly ever fed in the summer, one only wonders that there are not more ill deeds to set to their account.—Wide World Magazine.

Self Conquest

a Man From Himself

By CHRISTOPHER BARKLEY Copyright by American Press Asso-ciation, 1911.

Not far from Fort —, in what was then called the far west, was once a ranch house. In those days the Amer-Ican Indian was not kept in continued subjection, and the rancher built his house near enough to the fort to go there with those of his household for there with those of his household for protection in case of uecessity. The fort, now that the Indian has been eliminated, has sunk to nothingness in importance, and the ranch house is but a charred spot, having been burn-ed by the redskins years ago. Not an hour before its destruction a couple, a young officer from the fort and a girl, the rancher's daughter, were sitting on the broad veranda in the light of a full moon. Allen Kim-ball had enlisted in the United States ball had enlisted in the United States army because he could neither be controlled nor control himself. He had given in to almost every kind of dissipation, and at the end of a spree, not having the hardihood to meet his father and being out of money, in a fit of desperation be had enrolled himself in a cavariry regiment choosing elf in a cavalry regiment, choosing send him farthest from his home He had not been long at his station when trouble with the Indians came , and Kimball showed himself so on, and Kimball showed himself so brave that he was rapidly promoted through the noncommissioned grades and before the fighting was over was made a lieutenant. This gave him heart, and he determined to redeem himself with his family. But a pas sion for gambling stood in his way At those remote posts there was little At those remote posts there was little or nothing for the men to do except drink and gamble, and Lieutenant Kimball found the temptation to gam ble too strong for him. Once he had begun to play all caution deserted him, and he bet wildly. The result was dues formed a clique against him, and he found himself a "cut" man, which is the army expression for one whose brother officers will not speak to him though some dissented from the rest on the ground that Kimball did not de-

They were both recalled from the melancholy status existing between them by hearing distant sounds of a galloping horse, evidently coming at full speed. Both listened. The ani mal was not coming from the direction of the fort, but toward it. Kim ball knew that the Indians on the nearby reservation had been unruly, and something told him the comer was a messenger bringing a warn back on his haunches and cried out: "The Indians are coming! They're

Without a word Kimball ran for the stable near the house and in a few minutes returned, leading Winfred's mare, saddled and bridled. Her father was away from the ranch, and there was no one in the house but employees and servants. They, too, prepared for flight. Kimball put his companion on her horse, mounted himself, and they tore through the open gate and away toward the fort. They had scarcely started when behind them came that terrible whoop which only an Indian can give. Without a word Kimball ran for the

Sir Edwin Arnold as an Editor.
Sir Edwin Arnold was perhaps the most snave man who ever paced Fleet street. His correspondence must have been enormous, but it never seemed a tax. He hailed a contribution from an acquaintance with thanks on one day, begged forgiveness on the next for a day's inevitable delay in publication and the publication and the publication and the seement of the seement o tion and on the third offered his con-gratulations. At first sight people thought the friendly manner too good to be true, but Arnold proved true on long trial. "I am a nightly journal-ist," he once said, and one knew he took pride in the ambiguous sound of the "nightly." A proper knight of the pen was he.—London Chronicle.

QUAIL SHOOTING.

Some of the Difficulties That Confront the Man With the Gun. "One of the difficulties of quali "One of the difficulties of quali shooting lies in the very fact that would apparently make his killing a simple proposition, his rising near the gun," says Charles Askin in Outing. "Let me fliustrate: If a quali rose within ten feet of the gun and continued sailing around the shooter's head at a mile a minute gait the chances are that he couldn't be killed in ten shots, both the bird and the gun thanging angle with a rapidity beyond the ability of the mind to calculate. In the same way a close springing bird In the same way a close springing bird may change his angle with regard to the gun so rapidly as to entail a long and accurate swing before he can be and accurate swing before he can be covered.

The nature of the quali's flight frequently makes this long swing unavoidable. The bird may rise to the north, pass to the west and be killed to the south. Had it been possible to foresee that the bird would swing about to the south before being killed the gun might have been pointed there, rendering unnecessary a complex gun movement, but meantime the quarry would probably have gone in some other direction. The quali work that calls for care and skill is cover shooting, and the only safe rule there is to point your gun as near the bird as you can when he breaks and shoot as quickly as you can get on."

Space and Time Unconquerable. No cheating or bargaining will ever get a single thing out of nature's "establishment" at half price. Do we want to be strong? We must work. To be hungry? We must be kind. To be wise? We must look and think. No changing of place at a hundred miles an hour nor making of stuffs a thousand yards a minute will make us one whit stronger, happier or wiser. There was always more in the world han men could see, walked they ever to slowly; they will see it no better for going fast. And they will at last, and soon, too, find out that their grand inventions for conquering (as they think) space and time do in reality conquer nothing, for space and time are in their own essence unconqueration and booked. Space and Time Unconquerable. apie and, besides, did not want any conquering—they wanted using. A fool always wants to shorten space and time; a wise man wants to lengthen both. A fool wants to kill space and kill time; a wise man, first to gain them, then to animate them.—John Double.

I could not see his features, but I could feel his gratitude in the pressure of his hand and hear what he said Translated into English, it is this:

"Allah is great. When you are in trouble he will send me to help you."

With that he disappeared in the darkness.

The next day I walked past the point in the wall from which he had made his escape. I saw a hole just large enough for a lean body such as his to pass through. He had doubtless managed to secure some sharp imple ment, with which he had dug his way out through crumbling places. In deed, I visited his prison and was ment, with which he had dug his way out through crumbling places. Indeed, I visited his prison and was shown the cell in which he had lived for twenty years and the passage he had dug. But, conscious of the part I had taken in his escape, I did not linger longer than to satisfy my curiosity. Indeed, whenever a Turkish official looked at me I felt that I was suspected.

after all, come to be known as having midden the prisoner, I went to the United States consul and told him that feared arrest for an infringement of Turkish law and asked him to send every day to my lodgings to ask if I were still there. What I feared was being spirited away and put in a dungeon without any of my countrymen knowing what had happened. I was planning for a trip down into the desert, but I had my outfit to purchase and my attendants to hire. So it was impossible for me to get away for some time.

I have told my story. I shall not at tempt to explain it. Nor am I going to ask any one to believe it. I certainly do not expect persons to believe what I would not believe myself had it been told me instead of having happened to me. One thing occurred to me the moment I was conscious of having been saved. I was selzed with a desire to know whether I had been saved by the quick or the dead.

I joined a caravan passing through the oasls northward of Tripoll. On reaching there, after rest and having satisfied myself that the escaped prisoner I had hidden no longer occupied either the popular or official mind. I went to the castle for any information I might pick up. I interviewed those in charge as to what had become of the man who had escaped and found that his jailers felt considerable super sittion as to his disappearance, claiming that in his chains and hunted by so many persons he could not have escaped without the interposition of Allah.

I had tried in vain to secure the services of some trustworthy Bedouin who knew the desert and would make a safe guide. But whenever I found a man who knew the country I was warned that be would probably murder me and possess himself of my effects, and when I found a man with a reputation for morality he knew nothing about the desert. So we tolled on, hoping each day for some end to this frightful journey. Either a distant caravan, an oasts or even a band of robbers would have been welcome. And now the humps on the camels' backs became shrunken We had no water to give them, for we were using ourselves what remained in one of the pouches. We killed one of the camels for the water in its hump. Then we killed another. One of my men died, then another and an other, most of them mad, till about all were dead and I was left alone, a numan being with a camel. The prorogation of the legislature still seems to be a matter of the dis-tant future. Last year the session was ended in time for the members to was ended in time for the members to go home for June 17, but this year they may well have to reassemble and continue their work even after the Fourth of July. The house, which ordinarily holds back the time of alordinarily noise sack the child of a journment, is this year doing wonder-ful work as far as speed is concerned. Every day it disposes of the matters on the calendar and has to adjourn be-cause the various committees have not made reports which can be acted on. The committee on metropolitan affairs is working hard and faithfully under the leadership of Senator Mulligan and Representative Grafton Cushing but it nas many important matters still un lecided. A few other committees are behind time but generally speak ing they are those which have worked the hardest throughout the session. The committee on ways and means considers that it has been and still is considers that this been and sain immuch handicapped by the delay of Governor Foss in transmitting to the legislature his recommendations in relation to appropriations, but that they cannot be blamed for that delay. They have had such extra work thrown upon them as a result of the investigations and re-ports of the governor's "experts," but they have not been afraid to give time and thought and 'he result is that they are in a position to act at once in the various remaining appropriation bills as soon as they are received from his

The measure introduced by Senate Brown of Medford providing for the expenditure of $9,000,000 for the improvement of Boston harbor has beet favorably reported to the legislature and seems in a fair way of passage. This is one of the most far-reaching measures that has ever been brought before the Massachusetts legislature, and if enacted and signed by the gov-ernor will mean much to this city and state. There has been much agitation in favor of developing Boston as a

The legislature thought the matter not worthy of so much attention and rerefused to pass an order asking the creused to pass an order asking the court to decide the doubt. The ground of those who doubted if the veto was effective was that in refusing to approve the bill the governor made no real objections to it. There have been similar cases and similar questions, similar cases and similar questions, but wherever the courts have been called upon to settle them they have amost invariably decided that the veto was effective, even if the objections against the measure had not been disinct, or radical. The appointment of Judge William Schoffield of the Massachusetts su-perior court to be justice of the circuit court in Boston is giving very general satisfaction to lawyers and to everysatisfaction to lawyers and to every-body else, apparently. He will be an acceptable successor to Judge Lowell, who was the quintessence of honor and of very high ability. It will give Governor Foss an opportunity to name another superior court judge, which he will doubtless be glad to have, as here are many Democrats waiting to ecure judicial appointments. At the same time it will be an embarrass-ment to select one man from the large number who would like to be named.

Thayet-Myo, in Burma. On the morning of my visit there had undoubtedly been an unusual occurrence. A python twenty-two feet long and twenty-eight inches in girth had entered the vegetable garden and crossed it to the fowl pen. Besides the fowls, there were some five ducks in the pen. Now, the front of the pen was fenced with diamond most galvanised wire netting of a strong type.

The snake could not resist a fat duck, so, putting its head and neck through the stout diamond frame, it selzed and swallowed one. I have no doubt whatever that it would have "mopped up the bunch" inside the house, but that in adjusting No. I to make room for No. 2 it became aware of an ueasy feeling owing to the wire around its waist. Neither have I any doubt that in addition to becoming uneasy it became seriously alarmed.

Being now unable either to disgorge or to get away, it tore off the whole section of netting, 6 feet by 8, and returned with the necklace or waist-band through the cabbages. Not unnaturally, I think, the sentry, seeing a 6 by 8 foot wire section of fencing marching through the cabbage patch without any visible means of support, gave the alarm and then opened fire.

There is something about mines that the most marked effects he has noticed in men who have spent most of their life in mining is a sense of danger that suddenly comes over them.

"Some would call this faculty the

"I was walking along a main drift with a mine captain, a man who had been working in mines for over forty years, having started as a lad in the mines of Cornwall. Suddenly he stopped and exclaimed that something was wrong.

"For the life of me I could not see a thing amiss. The timbers seemed solid, and the drive pillars looked secure. But the captain was not astisfied and insisted on climbing into the stope to investigate. There he found

"Had this discovery not been made in time there would have been a serious accident in the mine, with a probable loss of life. I dare say the years of experience in the mine had developed a power in him which the men called superstition, but which was really the faculty of accurate observation, which to him seemed unconscious."

Trick by Which an Actor Achieved

Trick by Which an Actor Achieved a Realistic Stage Effect.

Daniel Frohman in his "Memories of a Manager" tells of a muscular trick by which Mr. F. Mackay achieved an astonishing stage effect.
It was in Bronson Howard's "One of Our Giris." Mr. Mackay was playing the part of a French count, who in the part of a French count, who, in one of the chief situations of the play, one of the chief situations of the play, is slapped in the face with a glove by an English officer. Mr. Howard's idea was that the count should become violent and furious at the affront, but Mr. Mackay contended that as he had been shown in the play to be an expert duelist and accustomed to danger he was not likely to lose control of him

Mr. Howard saw the point. The re Mr. Howard saw the point. The re-sult was that the Frenchman received the insult without the movement of a muscle. He stood rigid. Only a flash of the eye for an instant revealed his emotion. Then the audience saw his face grow red and then pale. This was followed by the quiet announce ment from the count that he would send his seconds to the Englishman This exhibition of facial emotion be This exhibition of facial emotion be-trayed by the visible rush of blood to the actor's face was frequently noted at the time. It was a muscular trick, Mr. Mackay put on a tight collar for that scene and strained his neck against it until the blood came, and when he released the pressure and the blood receded the effect was reached.

A Joke That Went Astray.

To illustrate the fact that some persons are devoid of the sense of humor this story was told at a downtown luncheon club: "I forgot to pay my newsboy last night and when I saw him this morning gave him the 5 cents due him and asid, 'I hought every minute last night you'd send a collector for this.' 'Naw, not on your life; not if you owed me twicet as much.' An if you owed me twicst as much.' An if you owed me twicst as much.' An hour later the boy came to my office, where he had never been before, wait ed for me and when I came said: 'Say, I'm awful sorry you thought I was sore about de nickel. Ye needn't pay me never till ye want to, and about sendin' for it—uix.' I thanked him, and now for trying to crack a joke I have secured a long line of credit."—New York Tribune.

The Aurora Borsalis.
According to a theory enunciated by Professor Lenard, the aurora borealis is formed of cathode rays, emitted by the sun and deflected by the terrestrial magnetic field in the upper strata of the atmosphere. The velocity of these cathode rays must be nearly equal to that of light and very much greater than the velocity of cathode rays produced in the laboratory. Lenard concludes that these extremely "hard" cathode rays are emitted by unknown radioactive substances in the sun. radioactive substances in the sun.

The detective was instantly alert.
"When did it happen, sir."
"Last evening about 11 o'clock. I will begin at the moment when I stepped into Flicksell's and bought the ring. I had been wanting it for some time, for it was a genuine antique.
History said it was the favorite finger ring of one of the emperors of the Ming dynasty. The workmanship was exquisite, with the delicate carving of the Chinese artisan. The ring was the Chinese artisan. The ring was formed of carved ivory, and the setting was a perfect piece of clear green jade with a dragon carved upon it.

"Flicksell had put a pretty steep price on it, and I had been beating him down until at last he met my him down until at last he met my offer. I sent him a check for the amount, and I stopped in there last evening on my way to the club and got the ring. I dined at the club and went to the theater afterward. When I got home I took the ring out and leid it or the table here. I turned away to remove my overcoat, and as I approached the table again to examine the jade ring I saw that it had vanished. I have not seen it since, nor Detective Fenn flung aside his cigar and twirled his fingers thoughtfully. "Anybody know you had purchased the ring?" he inquired.

"Jade rings don't vanish into thin air even if they are hundreds of years old," remarked Mr. Fenn, dropping upon his knees and examining the rug under the table. "I suppose you think maybe one of those old Ming emperors was hanging around and snatched it off when you wasn't looking."

Mr. Raddason smiled sheepishly "I'll admit that I've considered the probability of that happening, Mr Fenn. I've heard of some very queer results of that happening. Mr. Fenn. I've heard of some very querhappenings in connection with those ancient rings. I may as well say I've crawled all over the floor and I can't find a trace of the thing. I feel mightly uncomfortable over the matter."

GRANT WAS JESTING.

But the Plucky Southern Woman Was In Deadly Earnest. During his Virginia campaign Gen-eral Grant found it necessary one day to encamp some of his troops on the beautiful property of a Mrs. Stouton and also to take a room in the house for his own accommodation. He did so, however, with great tact and gentleness, quite winning the heart of the estimable lady. As he prepared to depart he turned to her.

"Now, Mrs. Stouton, we've enjoyed your hospitality very much, and I'm prepared to pay the bill," said Grant. She protested, but the general assured her that it was a business transaction and she was entitled to fair com beautiful property of a Mrs. Stout

"Now, Mrs. Stouton, would you like it in United States banknotes or in Confederate money?"
She pressed her lips together, her eyes flashed fire, and without a moment's hesitation she said:
"In Confederate money."
Grant looked at her with admiration.

A General's Last Order.

It is over a hundred years since General Mallet was shot for a conspiracy against Napoleon. The circumstances of his death (told by Mr. G. Duval in "Shadows of Old Paris") were curious. The Archbishop's Shirts.

One of the archbishop of Bordeaux, Mgr. de Sangay, was remarkable for his charity, giving to the poor, as he did, nearly everything in his possession. It happened at one time that he was without linen, and when his servents spoke of buying what he needed he put them off, anying always, "We will see about it." Then the good old woman in charge of his wardrobe made use of stratagem. "Monsignore." she said, "I come to ask your charity for a good work." "What is it, my good Jeanne?" "With your lordship's permission, I wish to spend some hours in which I have not much to do in making shirts for a poor old man who is sadly in need of them. Perhaps you would pay me for the stuff. Indeed, the good old man expects as much from you." "With the greatest pleasure," said the archbishop. "Here; this is all the money I have. Take it and get what you need." By this means he was provided with shirts, and he could not refrain from laughing when he learned the explanation of his faithful old servant's request.—

When we were tired we turn-ed out of the line. Our standard bearanother thing made a lot of difference to me—the fact that she had remem-bered me so long and recognized me notwithstanding that I had grown as tall as I am now. In the even ing when the others were setting off the fireworks Tottle and I stole away together and were so engaged with the wheels decorated with flowers, the wheels decorated with flowers, while the harness was covered with a profusion of red, white and blue rosettes and streamers. In the center on a raised dals stood a girl personating the Goddess of Liberty. The rest of the wagon was covered with little girls from six to twelve or thirteen girls from six to twelve or thirteen years old. I was one of two front boys who held the rope attached to our cannon, and I noticed especially one of the girls on the rear of the float. Her golden hair hung over her shoulders, and her eyes were great big blue ones. I straightway picked her out to fall in love with.

LODGE FOR

RECIPROCITY. At last Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of this State has found out where he is at on the Canadian Reciprocity question. He is in favor of and will vote for it, come what may. When the Free Trade scheme was first launched it was announced, as if by authority, that Senator Lodge was opposed to Taft's agreement with Canada, and in due time would make his opposition known in a speech in the U. S. Senate. Since then the country has been in doubt as to his attitude towards the measure.

our city will take a hand in the affair.

On June 17, 1775, an ancestor of Mr. Luke Warren Fowle hoed corn all day on a part of his farm where he watched the progress of the Battle with interest. On June 17, about 1883, a nearer relative of Mr. Luke Warren Fowle visited a residence in Woburn where he announced that he had just come from hoeing corn in a field in which his ancestor hoed corn the day the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought just 108 years before.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

It was thought last week that the idea of having a Fourth of July celebration in Woburn this year had been abandoned

It was then believed the time was too short in which to prepare and make ready for a celebration of respectable size and variety of features; to provide money for would tax the merchants and other business men, especially after that of the Country Fair, more than they ought to be called on to bear;

The state has now fourteen districts and under the new apportionment which has been authorized by the lower house of conthorized by the lower house of con-gress would be entitled to sixteen. The United States senate has not yet indorsed the bill and thus the matter waits for the time being. Speaker Walker has said that he will divide the redistricting committee exactly between members of the two leading political parties—an attitude which has caused some Republicans to feel that it would be better to have the question of redistricting go over to the legislature of 1912, when a new speaker would be in the chair, espe-cially as it is a delicate matter under any conditions to divide the state into congressional districts and takes considerable time.

If the whole matter does go over to the legislature of 1912 for action it will still be in time for the congressional election of 1912.

It is by no means uncommon in india for the children of a mahout to be cared for by the mahout's elephant.
The whole family of the mahout become, as it were, parasites to the elephant by which they earn their living.
Instances are not wanting of a mother's systematic placing of her baby in its trunk while the mother goes to fetch water or to get wood or materials to cook the family meal.

No jackal or wolf would be likely to pick up and carry off a baby who was in the jumgles know how very possible

it is for a jackal or a wolf to carry off

A Glimpse of the Home When White Guests Are Present.

The usual sights on entering an Eskim on habitation are: On the way opposite you a steamer-like berth covered with skins—the sleeping quarters of the family; underneath, or in front, stone or two women, busily sewing; to the right, a man making hunting gear. Never will you find an Eskime family led. All occupants are naked to the waist, sometimes only covered with a loin cloth. Along the wall on either side burn several lamps. These lamps are shallow soapstone basins filled with the oil of the seal, whale or walrus; along the edge is placed a little ridge of moss, which answers the purpose of the wick in our lamps. The lamps do not smoke, and, besides illuminating, throw a great heat. Above the flame hangs a piece of blubber, to replenish the oil, also a teakettle.

-i. e., illicit diamond buying—in South native abusive language. On arriving at the water the elephant, ostensibly in obedie nee to the child's command, lies down and enjoys himself, leaving just a portion of his body, like a small island, a bove the water. Upon this part of the elephant the child will stand and shout, shouting all the more if he has several companions of his own age also in charge of elephants all wallowing in the water around him. If the child should slip off his island the elephant's trunk promptly replaces him in safety. These urchins as they grow up become first mates to mahouts and eventually arrive at the dignity of being mahouts.—New York Press. of meat containing diamonds and driv of ment containing diamonds and driv-en across the river under the very noses of the police. Carrier pigeons were requisitioned to 'fly through the air with the greatest of ease laden with the brigands' booty. Hollowed heels inclosing diamonds sealed down with wax were also expedients em-ployed with decided and profitable success."

One lady had an ingenious way of getting out of a scrape. She was cooking dinner when a Cape boy knocked at the door and sold a forty carat diamond to her husband. "It was a trap. A detective immediately rushed in to arrest the buyer, searched the house, but no diamond could be found. The good wife had placed it in the stuffing of a goose she was basting."

The Use of Esquire.

The recovery of a letter which had been sent to a little town in Germany and never delivered to the person addressed cured the writer of the custom of adding "esquire" to a name on the superscription of mail matter. The letter in question would probably have been promptly delivered had the address read simply "Mr. John Brown." But the sender had addressed it "John Brown Esquire," and the communication rested comfortably in the "E" compartment of the poste restante department, waiting to be called tante department, waiting to be called for by "Mr. Esquire." One of the popular guide books warns against the use of "Esq.," saying that it might be mistaken for a name.

Not the Answer He Expected Not the Answer He Expected.
One of Lord Desborough's best anecdotes relates to a clergyman who was far more at home in the hunting field than in the pulpit, says London Tit-Bits. On the morning of a meet he was much annoyed at having to officiate at a funeral; but, this over, he mounted his horse and started in pursuit of his friends. On the road he sought information of an old woman with a donkey cart.

Death in Factory Fires.

The question is often debated as to wether persons who lose their lives in a fire developing with great rapid ity undergo extreme physical suffer ing. An authoritative opinion is expressed by the New York Medical Jourpressed by the New York Medical Jour-nal, which says: "Unnecessary an-guish of mind has probably been felt by relatives of unfortunate workers killed in factory fires by reflection on the supposedly agonizing pain caused by such a death. Where a great bulk of highly inflammable substances is quickly consumed in a closed space the result is the production of large quan tities of carbon monoxide. This gas titles of carbon monoxide. This gas, it is well known, combines with the haemogobin of the blood to form a compound that refuses to combine with oxygen. The result is a speedy and probably painless asphyrlation before the flames have had a chance to attack the bodies of the victims."

Dainty Snails.

The writer who qualified the snail as "foul and unclean" was guilty of a libel. Snails are most dainty feeders and strict vegetarians, as many gardeners know to their cost. Apparently three centuries ago snails were more popular in England than they are now. The fastidious author of "The Faerie Queene" gives a recipe for their preparation: Dainty Snails.

MAIL POUCHES.

They Cost From a Few Cents to Thou-They Cost From a Few Cents to Theusands of Dollars Each.

Uncle Sam has twenty-eight different kinds of mail bags in service, and they range in cost from 22 cents to $2,159 each. There are mail pouches for almost every conceivable use, and you can ship almost anything that comes within the postal regulations with a minimum of loss and breakage, says Harper's Weekly. Probably the most peculiar mail bag is the one ar-therpoor, and in the weave there are thirteen stripes of blue. Each country marks its own mall pouches in some individual way, so that if one gets lost in a far country its ownership can be readily detected.

Nearly 65,000,000 mall bags are used each year by the whole country, and as they are being worn out all the time the supply has to be kept up. There are mail bag hospitals, where tens of thousands of them go every week. One such mall bag hospital repairs upward of 5,000 a day. These cippled bags are in all sorts of dilapidated conditions. A railroad wreck may injure several hundreds or thousands, and these must all go to the hospital before entering active life again. Christmas is responsible for much damage to the mail bags, owing to the hard service they get, and immediately after the midwinter holiday season several hundred thousand bags rout the hospitals season several hundred thousand bags rout the hospitals. season several hundred thousand bags go to the hospitals.

Mail bags are the most traveled of all stantly moving, and it would be impossible to estimate the number of possible to estimate the number of miles a bag ten years old has tray eled.

"Guilt is aiways personal," said Harmon to Roosevelt, and he resigned his commission to investigate rebating because Teddy was inclined to shield Morton.

The most notable achievement accomplished by the executive during the legislative session was the enactment of the Wyman bill, including the Ore gon plan of nominating and electing United States senators.

A conference committee was appointed to frame a compromise senatorial nomination and election bill. "I would vote for a Republican for United States senator if the people by their votes declared for a Republican," the governor told this committee during the conference. "I would be proud to do it. I would simply be doing the will of the people." One of the committee suggested the Oregon plan was undemocratic. The executive plan was undemocratic. The supremely important achievements of the Ohio Democracy under the leadership of Governor Harmon may be divided into transactions and legislations, first, for the elimination of graft; second, such reform in the tax system as will protect the tax payer from the tax spender and will properly owners; third, the application of business methods and economy in public expenditures, and county in public expenditures, and county in the enactment of purely non partisan laws for the benefit of the entire people, irrespective of political parties, and designed to make rule by a specific part of the proper in the tax shaded on the property of the defeates will be elected on bailots absolutely will be elected on bailots absolutely shaded in proposition that has come before a Buckeye general assembly in many years. Selfsh hands were being outstretched to get control of the constitutional convention to be held in the proper where a large number of taxing boards composed of various state officers with jurisdiction over excise and other corporate taxation, but different obcards were made up of different officers so that there could be no uniform and consistent action. Auditors in eighty-eight Ohio counties had nearly eighty-eight Ohio counties had nearly eighty-eight different rules of appraising property, with the result that no one got a square deal.

After he became governor two years ago Mr. Harmon quietly began his investigation of the methods by which public money had been loaned by Republic money had been loaned by Republican state treasurers. He learned they put interest earnings in their pockets. There followed in rapid order sults against the estate and bondsmen of W. S. McKinnon, former state treas urer, for $116,785 and interest thereon; against former State Treasurer 1. B. Cameron and his bondsmen for $211, 721 and interest thereon. They were Republicans. Another graft investigation brought forth the exposure, prosecution and conviction of Mark Slater, former Republican state printer, on graft charges in lesser degrees; the settlement of an interest claim of over $5,700 on funds carried in the bank for former Republican State Auditor Walter D. Guilbert and the filing of a claim for over $31,000 with the receiver of a defunct bank at Columbus as an interest charge on funds carried in that bank by Mr. Guilbert as auditor.

These revelations during the governor's first term awakened the civic conscience and paved the way for his subsequent re-election. The Democrate captured the general assembly at the same time.

But the general assembly took a long step forward from boss domination of the courts by enacting a bill provid-ing in the future that all Ohio judges, from the dignified gowned justices of the supreme court down to the humble laymen, who sit as justices of the laymen who sit as justices of the peace, shall be elected on tickets ab-

In less than three years of his administration Governor Harmon has made a record of accomplishment unparalleled in the history of Ohio politics. He has wrought more progress for the people than was accomplished in the forty years that preceded him. There has been written into the statutes legislation that the enlightened citizens had been demanding and pleading for in vain for decades.

The party emblem in municipal elections is an aid to the ignorant and those who corrupt voters and no help to upright and intelligent electors. Both parties would be better off if they were kept out of purely municipal elections.

The people who support the government have to economize. Why should their public servants not do the same?

It is not the existence or discovery of wrongdoing that brings shame to a state, but failure to put a stop to it.

We must make the state government more broadly useful, for its powers are ample to grapple with many things which have been developed by new conditions.

The advantage of purchasing supplies for all institutions in bulk and the reduction in employees will save the state $500,000 a year. This law makes it possible to utilize the work of prisoners and also creates a market for their manufactured products by compelling all Ohio political divisions to purchase such supplies as they need from the penal institutions.

Employers and employees locked in a struggle over a workingmen's compensation act, and when it seemed there would be no bill passed Governor Harmon stepped in and acted as arbitrator. A bill was framed and drafted that has been approved by both employees and employers.

ers of the state tax commission.
Ohioans expected big things from Judson Harmon when they elected him their governor. The achievements of the Democratic general assembly show the expectations of the people have been realized. He had been a leading attorney for years, but a search of his record disclosed Harmon, while he has corporations among his clients, had never given his talents to appear in a court suit against the people. As an attorney general of the United States he had proved to be a friend of the people, fighting through court cases which established the foundation of all jurisprudence on the anti-trust subject. In private life he was recognized as one of the ablest lawyers in Ohio. In February, 1910, ten mouths before the state election in Ohio, when Judson Harmon would go before the people for re-election, Ohio Republicans by or der of President Taft held a harmony mentles in Datton. The Benublicans for re-election, Ohio Republicans by or der of President Taft held a harmony meeting in Dayton. The Republicans at Dayton did not talk of helping President Taft or of restoring the Republican party; they talked about the chance of defeating Governor Harmon, and they did not talk hopefully. Un consciously they paid a patent tribute to the real strength of the man. Its suddenly revealed the tremendous sucsuddenly revealed the tremendous su cess of Governor Harmon and his complete mastery of the political situation in Ohio. The plan of opposition out fined in Dayton has never ceased. No lined in Dayton has never ceased. No governor has ever been opposed by so strong a force as Governor Harmon. During his first term of two years a Republican general assembly to discredit him reduced the treasury balance $2,652,858.68 by making appropriations exceed revenues and also created obligations amounting to $2,000,000 more by deciding to build new structures for state institutions. When the revenues were reduced $500,000 a year revenues were reduced $500,000 a year by voting out saloons and several hundred thousands of dollars were added

If he should not avail bimself of the law, however, the employee may sue for damages for injuries, or his legal representative in case of death may maintain the action. And in such suits the employer is deprived of the common law defenses of fellow servant rule, assumed risk and contributory negligence.

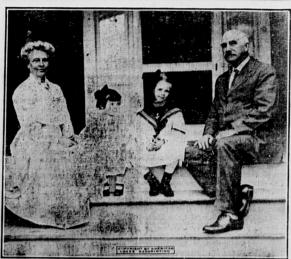

The employee cannot resort to the courts for damages when injured in the factory of a corporation which pays into the state compensation fund except when the injury is caused by the disregard of a law, ordinance or order issued by an authorized public officer providing for the protection of employees or by the willful wrong of an employer, his officer or agents.

The employer contributes 90 per cent. A wards range from $3,400 to $1,500 and are graded on the scale of wages paid employees.
The taxing laws of the state were a joke when Mr. Harmon was inducted into office and the taxpayers had no means to check extravagance of their public officers. These men deedd on the amount of money they were going to spend in a year and then made a levy to produce that amount. Taxpayers could fon nothing but pay.

"The authority which demands must be curbed," said the executive in a message to the general assembly. That body obeyed and passed the Smith bill which limited the maximum tax rate that could be levied by public officers in each district to 1 per cent of tax duplicates. That was sufficient, the governor held, for an economical ad ministration. If more money were needed there was incorporated in the Smith bill a provision for a referendum vote on a higher rate.

Mr. Harmon's idea of what Democracy should do can be summed up in the clossing words of an interview which he gave, as follows:

"I take it that the true platform of the Democracy is the preservation to the utmost of the rights of the common man—the man who has not might or wealth to twist the current of events to suit himself, to observe to the strictest possible degree the limits of authority imposed by the constitution, to administer the government. The strictest possible degree the limits of authority imposed by the constitution, to administer the government excommingly and in doing that to levy only the amount of taxes, direct or through a tariff, which will meet the expenses of the government. The continued. "Without such a tax the expenses of the Gederal government, which now amount to a billion dollars per year, cannot be fairly distributed. They are now collected by tariff and other taxes."

This Hezekiah, whose name signifies "the strength of Jehovah," was one of the best kings that reigned over the bingdom of Judah. In the sixth year of his reign the king of Assyria carried the ten tribes into captivity, as we shall learn more fully in next week's lesson (II Kings xix, 10-12). The king of Assyria threatened to do to Judah as he had done to Israel and wrote a blasphemous letter which Hezekiah spread before the Lord, and he and the prophet Isalah prayed and cried to heaven, and the Lord sent an angel who smote in one night 185,000 of the Assyriar army (II Kings xix, 00-12) of the Assyriar army (III Kings xix, 00-12) of the Assyriar army (II Kings xix, 00-12) of

She Rewards a Patient

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The barnyard fence divided Jacob Keene's farm from that of his neighbor, Lorenzo Nettle, Jacob leaned over the fence and looked wistfully at the gaunt framed white mare that drooped dejectedly near the closed door of her stable. Her ragged, unkempt mane was tangled with burs, some of last year's crop. One eye was of that dull blue, denoting a sightless vision; the other ontic, of a soft less vision: the other optic, of a soft brown mildness, was turned toward the watchful Mr. Keene. The mare shifted her sprung knees and wheezed smitted her sprung knees and wheezed patiently.

Jacob turned and stumped into the house, scattering the gathered chickens with his sudden imperuosity.

"Lizzie," he said, addressing his wife, "it's a confounded shame how Loren zo treats that mare. I wish I had the money to buy Daisy off of him." Mrs. Keene turned mild blue eyes on her frate lord. "I wish you had, dear," she said meekly.

"Wishing dou't do any good," snapped Jacob.

"That's what I was thinking," she admitted tactlessly admitted facticessly.

"Humph! That's all the sympathy
I get, Lizzle Keene."
"You're making yourself sick over that horse," objected Mrs. Keene as her husband moved his chair, away from his half tasted supper. "If Lorelzo won't sall believe to rook renzo won't sell Daisy to you, why don't you give up the idee?"

renzo won't sell Daisy to you, why don't you give up the idee?"

Jacob glared out of the window and swallowed hard. "It ain't that Lorenzo don't want to sell the critter, Lizzle," he explained impatiently. "He ain't got no use for her with the brown horse. He's just naturally a mean hunks and because he knows I've been wanting to buy back Daisy ever since Uncle Willie sold it to Lorenzo without giving me first bid on it. I never heard of a Nettle yet that knew how to treat a critter human."

"He gives her enough to eat, don't be?" asked Mrs. Keene deprecatingly.

"Yes, after he's kept her waiting long enough, and she gets drink, too, after awhile. But If she only had half the attention that the brown one gets she'd make a mighty good looking horse."

His wife opened her eyes wide.
"But she's terrible sprung, and somebody said she had the heaves, Jacob."

"Heaves or no heaves, I'll bet I could make that critter look like a lady inside of a week," asserted Jacob confidently, "I've never forgot how she looked when Uncle Willie used to drive her to clurch on Sundays, White as snow she was, and her mane aif crinkly like silk, with a bitte ribbo-tied in her forelock. She looks white as snow now, don't she?" he jeered, pointing at the sorry procession enter ing the Nettle stable. Mrs. Keene arose and pressed her thin nose to the win-

NOT A MATTER OF COURAGE

One to Do the Right Thing In an Un-expected Emergency—A Soldier and Shell and a Man and a Murder.

There is a distinction to be drawn between presence of mind and cour-ige. Persons who naturally are timid nd nervous will in circumstances of heir powers on ordinary occasions.

We speak of these as instances of presence of mind. But if you ask them they would tell you that an in-voluntary impulse rather than any premeditated course of action guided their will on the occasion. Had they time for reflection when all the threatening danger to themselves had become clear to their minds their natural timidity of character would have asserted itself and deprived them of action.

It is absence of fear that prompts the soldier under a heavy fire from the enemy's guns to go to the assist ance of a wounded comrade and bring premeditated course of action guided the enemy's guns to go to the assist the fact that consumption is a containing him to a place of safety, and nothing in human nature can compare with such self sacrifice. But in times of sudden emergency it is not always the bravest who act with promptitude. The following story is an instance of this:

The following story is an instance of this:

One of our transports was returning from the Philippines with invalided men, and one morning at sea a group of officers on the deck discussed the subject of firing shells. A soldier was told by the colonel to bring an empty shell with a fuse. The colonel took the shell in the head and extiture. the shell in his hands and, striking a

As this slow by burned and the colonel proceeded with his address to the other officers another soldier passed the group, and the moment he caught sight of the shell he rushed forward, exclaiming, "Look out, sir; the shell is a live one!" Then he did what never seemed to have come into the minds of any in the group of officers. He seized the shell out of the hands of the colonel and threw it into the sea. For this service he was promoted. The soldier who had been told to bring an empty shell had gone to the wrong magazine. Those who talked with the man touching this incident say that he repudiated any idea of having done a brave thing. "I don't know," he said, "what made me seize the shell out of the colonel's hand, but it came suddenly into my mind, and I did it." It is this wave of unconscious thought which constitutes true presence of mind. This will come to people of nervous and of a man known to be utterly deficient of courage who saved himself from a Late one evening he was returning home through some of the back streets, which at that hour were more or less empty of people. As he went along, however, he noticed some distance ahead of him a man and a woman walking side by side, the man's arm being around the woman's neck. Just a liner a street lamp the couple stopped for a moment, when the organist heard a piercing scream and saw the woman slowly falling from the man's arms. Almost before she had reached the ground the man darted away down a side street and disappeared.

When the organist came up to the woman he found, to his horror, that she was lying in a pool of blood. His first impulse was to run away and get clear of the terrible scene, but his better feelings prevailed, and he knelt down beside the poor woman to see if he could do anything for her. When he raised her head he found she was quite dead, with her throat cut from ear to ear. Beside her on the pave—

Smith has the disease and goes to the west. He feels and looks in perfect health long before a year is gone. He returns home, satisfied that he is again in the tenacious clutches of the disease.

There is a lesson in this. The open alir treatment is all right, but it must be carried out by right methods. All early cases of consumption which have failed to recover by outdoor treatment must lay the blame to faulty treatment. Jones, who recover the ground in doing so avoided the ground the man darted away down a side street and disappeared.

Consumption Must Be Prevented Rather Than Cured.

STAMP OUT THE INFECTION.

Unless the Germs of the Disease In the Habitation, Whether It Be House or Tent, Are Utterly Destroyed Fresh Air and "Cures" Avail Little.

There is no cure for tuberculoris, and probably never will be, accepting the word "cure" in the sense of some special medicine. A disease prevented is better than cured, for no one is so is better than cured, for no one is so well off physically or financially after any illness, and particularly does this truth apply to tuberculosis. The suc-cessful prevention of a disease does away with any need for its "cure." This is well exemplified in the case of yellow fever. We have never succeeded in finding a cure for that former scourge of the south, but we have done far better. We have wheel out the disease bodily, bag and baggage, by simple preventive methods.

Lightning Kills Few. Lightning Kills Few.

In 1906 lightning killed only 169 people in this whole country. One's chances of death by lightning are less than two in a million. The chances of death from liver, kidney or stomach trouble is vastly greater, but not if Electric Bitters be used, as Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, i.a., proved. Four dectors gave him up after eight months of suffering from virulent liver trouble and yellow jaundice. He was then completely cured by Electric Bitters, They're the best stomach, liver, nerve and kidney remedy and blood purifier on earth. Only 50c at All Druggists.

There is much criticism of the bill in relation to the question of extending the leases. Some of the Boston papers denounce any provision for such a long lease as is contemplated by this measure. It is quite likely tunate that so important a measure as this one should have to be hastily considered in the last days of the

It appears that Speaker Walker was mistaken in supposing that Senator Lodge is hostile to the rec procity treaty. The senior senator has put himself on record as favoring that treaty and he will not permit amendments to defeat the bill. Lodge has convinced so good a Dem crat as Henry M. Whitney of Brook-line that he is absolutely loyal to the treaty with Canada and that ought to satisfy anybody. As a matter of fact, Senator Lodge has believed that the treaty would injure the New En land fishing industry and for reason he would like to see the amended in that respect. O'Connell's Wonderful Oratory.

Daniel O'Connell, the Irish orator, spoke in Covent Garden, London, many years ago, and John Coleman, an old English actor, pictured him as follows: "The audience hung spelibound on the words of the great orator. His resonant and magnificent volee, flavored with its rich Hibernian accent, held both soul and sense captive. As for me, my Celtic blood took fire, my heart throbbed with passionate indignation or melted into tears as he dwelt upon the wrongs of my beloved country. Never, surely, was such a born orator! Stern men cried one moment and laughed the next. Strange to say, they never laughed in the wrong place, though once at least he afforded them a unique opportunity. As he approached the end of his oration, carried away by his theme, he took his wig off (a brown 'jāczy') put it in his hat and mopped his beautiful baid brow with a great faming crimson bandanna. The action appeared so natural and appropriate that no one seemed to think it absurd or even incongruous."

Couldn't Hurt His Brain.
Strickland W. Gillilan says that Sam
Jones and "Sunshine Hawks" of Baltimore, the revivalists, were invited to the home of a good brother and sister in the shurch. At the disparately timore, the revivalists, were invited to the home of a good brother and sister in the church. At the dinner table it transpired that the sister had had a sinister purpose in issuing the invitation, for she said: "Mr. Jones, I wish you'd teli my husband that smoking is injurious to him. I know it is, but he won't believe it. I wish you'd tell him, and it might have some influence over him."

"No, sister," said Jones, who was himself an inveterate smoker, "I can't tell him that. Smoking injures only the human brain. And he hasn't any brain to injure, or he wouldn't have married you. Now, sister, I came here to eat—that is what I was invited fornot to lecture. So if you'll carve that turkey, give me a piece of the white meat and Hawks a leg we'll be all right." And that husband's gratitude lives yet.

Defining a Boundary Line.

In 1847 Rufus Choate appeared in behalf of parties whose rights were affected by the boundary line between Massachusetts and Rhode Island, thus described in the agreement:

"Beginning," etc., "thence to an angle on the casterly side of Watuppa pond, thence across said pond to the two rocks on the westerly side of said pond and near thereto, thence westerly to the buttonwood tree in the village of Fall River."

In his argument, commenting on the boundary, Mr. Choate thus referred to this part of the description: "A boundary line between two sovereign states described by a couple of stones near a pond and a buttonwood sapling in a villaged. The commissioners might as well have defined it as starting from a blue fay, thence to a swarm of bees in hiving time and thence to 500 foxes with firebrands tied to their tails."—Minneapolis Journal.

When Parasols Began.
Parasols when they first came into use must have been cumbersome. Henri Estienne, writing in 1578, speaks of a parasol as capable generspeaks of a parasol as capable generally of sheltering four persons from the sun. And when they diminished in circumference the material still remained of the heaviest. Red velvet parasols, with heavy gold fringes, were carried by ladles of fashion in the days of Louis XIV. At that time it was possible when crossing a bridge in Paris to hire a parasol at one end and deposit it at the other, the charge for the accommodation being a sou. Under the regency fashion went to the other extreme. Men's parasols folded into the shape of a three cor-nered hat and could thus be carried elegantly under the arm. Ladies' pareleganty under the arm. Ladies par-asols were hinged, so that they could slip into the pocket, for ladies had pockets then.—London Spectator.

Proved Himself Great

With a sigh she laid down the maga-gine article upon Daniel O'Connell.
"The day of great men." she said, "is gone forever."
"But the day of beautiful women is not," he responded.

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT. GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal hability of its_responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional_$100,000.

Europe the principalities of Pertonia and Weaden have disappeared from and Weaden have disappeared from the map. They were carred out of the ancient territory called Helvetta and were adjoining provinces. For years the boundary line between the two was a matter of dispute, and much blood had been spilled without any progress being made to fix it perma-nently. At last war had reduced them both to bankrunter. both to bankruptcy.
One day a young man, Herman voi

Gratz, rode into the capital of Weader drew up at the palace of the reigning prince and announced himself as an prince and announced himself as an envoy extraordinary from the sover-eign of Pertonia, having power to make a treaty with his neighbors of Wenden establishing a boundary line. At the time of his arrival the minister of foreign affairs was with the prince who, having heard Von Gratz's an nouncement, turned to his cabinet of ficer and said

"Count von Steinwitz, negotiate a treaty such as this young man is sent to make. I do not wish to see it or be consulted with regard to it till it ha been signed, sealed and delivered. Then, if it is satisfactory to me, I will Then, If it is satisfactory to me, I will make you a marquis, giving you at the same time one of my estates. The minister and the ambassado bowed themselves out, mounted horses and rode to Von Steinwitz's castle.

There was a great difference in years between the two diplomats, Von Stein witz being over sixty years old, while witz being over sixty years old, while Von Gratz was scarcely thirty. The former was not much worried for his head, for he was a veteran in diploma-cy and had no fear but that he could outwit the younger and less experi-enced man. Upon their arrival the host placed his guest in the handsom est suit of apartments in the castle. est suit of apartments in the castle left him and, going to his cabinet, or dered an attendant to say to his daugh ter, the Countess Bertha, that he wish ed her to come to him. utes the maiden joined her father, and he said to her:
"A young diplomat is here from the king of Pertonia. Make it your business to win his heart."
"Yes, father," said the girl dutifully and retired. She asked no reason for this strange request, and none was of fered. Like all girls of that period, she was accustomed to hear and to obey. Parents did not give reasons for their orders.

Von Gratz met Bertha von Steinwitz Von Gratz met Bertha von Stelmvitz at supper the same evening. No orders were necessary in either case so far as love was concerned, for the young diplomat as soon as he set eyes on the countess was enraptured. And Bertha in the handsome face and figure, the intellectual cast of Von Gratz's head and countenance, saw an ideal head and countenance, saw an ideal such as she had treasured from childhood. After the meal the crafty count withdrew to his cabinet, leaving the

All day they rode through the woods attended by a retinue of cour tiers and servants. Bertha not only found any attempt to fascinate her companion repulsive, but needless. She had only to be herself to win him, and she gave her heart to him without She had only to be herself to win him, and she gave her heart to him without the asking. Love is a finer diplomat than any earthly sovereign has ever employed. The two breathed it in with the pure air. When their birds took flight for the coveted game, though their eyes followed, their hearts remained in proximity. And when the hunt was ended and they rode back to the castle they took no thought of love the little god alone had a one for the castle they took no thought of love; the little god alone had a care for

The second day was like the first And so the time passed. Love progressed, but not the treaty. Ten days had gone by, and not a point in it had been discussed. Then the young diplomat began to realize that he loved his antagonist's daughter. A new feature had come over the treaty. If the count achieved a diplomatic advantage count achieved a diplomatic advantage the lover would lose his head. If the lover secured a victory the father of the girl he loved must die. There could be but one happy result—a trea-ty so inspired by generous motives that the work when finished would be satisfactory to both severeigns. satisfactory to both sovereigns and the two sat down together over papers and maps.

Now, Herman von Gratz had been sent on this mission because he was a wonder in the game of diplomacy. The two principalities were to him but chessboards. If he gave up a town and gained an island, if he left out a province for future consideration and Michaelangelo "fit to be the gates of paradise," represent the book of Genesis in all the depth of its meaning, and the skill of the artist has never been overpraised. It is impossible to exaggerate the glory of the work, and final checkmate of his enemy's king. During this first morning, when present matter. He was thinking of Bertha and that if he possessed her she must be given him by his opponent in the diplomatic game. The count saw the necessity, but acquiesced reluctantly. The boundary ran for a distance of some 500 miles, at times the natural division being a mountain chain, at times a river. The field on which the game was played was so broad that only one who had a head fitted for the purpose could retain at one time its different parts. The players sat down to work at 10 in the morning and never ceased even for a meal till 10 at night. Then on the concessions of both parties they drew the treaty. When it was finished it must be signed, for every step in it was irrevocable.

Von Gratz put his signature to it without reading it. The count dreaded to do the same, but there was no escape. Then his antagonist leaned back in his chair while Von Steinwitz read the document. He had not half finished it when he paled. His enemy had secured an overwhelming advantage.

had secured an overwheiming advan-tage.

For a few moments the count gave himself up for lost. Then suddenly he remembered his instructions to his daughter. He had given them with a view to providing for such a contin-gency as this and had observed the re-sults. Retaining his presence of mind, he expressed no dissatisfaction with the treaty. The seals of both principali-ties were attached, and the instrument ties were attached, and the instrument was de facto.

"You will remain as my guest a few

The old count looked at his younger victor in astonishment. Then beads of perspiration stood out on his face, and he trembled. Lastly he folded Von Gratz in his arms with the words:
"My noble son."

It was the lover who made the new draft of the treaty, while the old man sat giving his faculties time to regain their equilibrium. For an hour Herman jotted down memoranda, making ernsures and adding new data on the map, then wrote out the articles of agreement. When the statement was finished he handed it to the count, remarking:

It is highly probable that the manufacture of linens is of greater an tiquity than that of silk. Archaeologists generally admit that the mummy colts of the mass avariety of finest linen. The Egyptian and Jewish priests were it at all their ceremonies. We find mention of fine linens all through the Old and New Testaments. When the queen of Sheba visited Solomon she was habited in linen. In Revelation the angels are clothed in "pure and white linen." Genesis tells us that Pharaoh arrayed Joseph in vestures of fine linens. Silk is mentioned in the Bible only four times.

While coffee beans dry with age, teas absorb moisture even when in zinc lined chests. Tea likewise deteriorates with age. It doesn't lose strength so much as it does its drawing quality, which is another name for flavor or bouquet. So careful are the tea packers to insure an entire absence of moisture from the tea when being placed in the zinc or lead lined chests that they have the tea leaves chests that they have the tea leaves sun dried and then heated before packing. THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings xvii, 1-14—Memory Verse, 14—Golden Text, Prov. xxix, 1—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

A brief summary of the story of the ten tribes and their sin is found in verse 21 of our lesson chapter in these words, "He rent Israel from the house of David, and they made Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, king, and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the Lord and made them sin a great sin." Our whole lesson today is a summary of the sin of the ten tribes. From their first king, Jeroboam, to their last, Hoshea, they had, including these two nineteen rulers covering a period of 200 years, part of which was an intergraphic than the solution of the single period of the single pe of David, and they made Jeroboam. 200 years, part of which was an inter-regnum and part a time of anarchy. There was not one good ruler among them all, nor any real turning to the Lord, though He sent them from time to time as His messengers to plead with them, the unnamed man of God from Judah and the prophets Ahijah, Elijah, Micalah, Elisha, Jonah, Hosea, Amos and Oded. The record of their persistent rehellion and stip to given Amos and Oded. The record of their persistent rebellion and sin is given briefly in verses 14 to 18 of our lesson chapter, and what a record it is! They would not hear, did not believe in the Lord their God, rejected His statutes, left all His commandments, followed vanity and became vain, sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the Lord. The record concerning Judah over a hundred years later reads thus: "They mocked the messengers of God and despised His words and misused His prophets until the wrath of the His prophets until the wrath of the Lord arose against His people till there was no remedy" (II Chron.

xxxvi. 16) Last days have always been times o Last days have always been times of great rebellon against God, as were the days of Noah before the flood (Gen. vl. 5. 11, 12), and, according to the testimony of our Lord Jesus, such will be the case again at the end of this age just before He shall come in His glory to set up His kingdom o His glory to set up His kingdom of righteousness and peace on this earth (Matt. xxiv. 37-39; Luke xvii. 26-30). The present unbelief in high places, in pulpits and in many theological seminaries is a sure indication that we are in the last days of this evil age, which are described in II Tim, iii, 1-5; iv. 3, 4; II Pet, iii, 3-7. As truly as the flood came in the days of Noah, the captivities of Israel and Judah in their day, the destruction of Jerusalem and the Pretty Fine Scratches.

Most people consider a polished surface as something absolutely smooththat is, something with no scratches on it whatever. To polish a thing, however, the very reverse is done to it it is filled with very fine scratches. All eyeglass lenses, glass for mirrors, furniture, etc., are rubbed with due emery paper and later with an extremely fine powder which gives the efficient of the scratches. Now the question arises as to just how dine the scratches not just how of an apart they must be, for big scratches a good distance apart give anything but a polished surface. The answer is that the scratches or ridges between must be less than one-quarter the wave length of the light that falls on the surface for the light to be reflected and thus give the effect of a polished surface. This is less than one two-hundred-thousandth of an inch for light waves. No breaking up of the waves is caused, and they consequently are reflected in their original form.—New York Tribune.

Blood, as was scientifically explained at the time, happens to be one of the substances that absorb ultra violet rays, and when any of these substances have found their way to a receptive surface no amount of erasing or cleansing can hide its presence from the camera eye. When the latter is equipped to utilize only this invisible light the result is much more marked. Should the neatest erasure be made in writing done with substances specially mbsorhent of the rays the ultra violet photograph would show the traces of the erasure as plainly as the writing itself.—New York Tribune.

The father of a small family tells us this one:

"My wife instructed our little boy when he was invited out to lunch the other day that when he was asked to have a second helping of cake he should refuse. You must say, "No, I thank you, I've had enough," said she. "And don't you forget it."

It is written in Tit, il, 14 concerning present day believers that "Our Saviour Lesus Christ gaye Himself for us that Jesus Christ gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquit; He might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto Himself a people for His own possession" (revised version). When we consider the conformity to this present age of the great mass of church members instead of their sepa-ration unto God we can but wonder at His mercy and long suffering, but the day of the Lord will come.

SAVAGES AND CLOTHES. Carefulness That Was Not Appreciated

Carefulness That Was Not Appreciated by the Missionaries.

Ardent missionaries were trying to convert the natives of a village in unclad Africa to modesty as well as to Christianity and for that purpose provided them all with more or less complete outlits of clothes. The natives were delighted and spent several days simply in parading in civilized garb through the one narrow village street. But when Sunday arrived and the blacks thronged to the weekly church service, carrying the new clothes in service, carrying the new clothes in bundles under their arms, the mission girl, "that I can't understand, and that is the Chinese custom of committing suicide by eating gold leaf. It can't understand how gold can kill."

time he would go about as a peddler, first haul, John Wagstaff. He changed his name every time he worked one of his schemes, but Wagstaff was what we called him.

I had done some neat work under disguises myself and determined that if I could locate the villain I would match him at his own game. So when news came that he was stopping with a widow about five miles up the creek I determined to go for him. I went as a traveling evangelist, mounted and with a pair of saddlebags filled with tracts. Two revolvers hung to my waist under my trousers. I hadn't any clerical garb, so I got one of the women to make me a white cravat.

got one of the women to make me a white cravat.

When I reached the widow's house I told her that I was going to work in the vineyard of the Lord in that region for a few days and would like to put up at her house. She didn't object, saying that she had another clergyman boarding with her and she thought we two would take an interest in each other's work. I assured her that we would, and truthfully, for I didn't doubt that the other clergyman was the man I was after.

I had a description of Wagstaff given me by a man he had robbed. The rascal was a short, thick man, with especially large ears that stood out like a donkey's. I didn't see my fellow clergyman till the next morning at breakfast, when I recognized him at once by the description, especially his cars. He had probably robbed a clergyman of a suit of clothes. for he was in full Episcopal canonicals. I saw him cast a quiek glance at me, after which he attended to his breakfast. When our landlady came in she introduced us—Wagstaff as Mr. Warbury, me as Mr. Tidball. I had fortified myself to play the parson by a smattering of Bible lore and was curlous to discover if Wagstaff could match me on that ground, so I opened conversation with him with that in yiew. I saw that he didn't know what church that was, but he said he would be very glad to assist me in any work I had laid out for myself.

"Are you engaged in missionary work," I asked, "or are you on your way from one field to another?"

"Oh, I'm just making a convert here and there wherever I can."

"It would be well, brother, if you could make a convert of a ranchman I visited yesterday, William Bittinger, who lives not far from here. He has been favored by the Lord with world ly goods, and he should aid the cause with gifts of money. I found him very hard of heart—indeed, a scoffer. When I asked him for means with which to replenish my tracts he took me into a little room in the rear of the ranch house and showed me a pile of gold and silver dollars, saying at the same time: 'You see, I have plenty to give, but not a cent for you lazy parsons. You should all be set to real work.'"

Wagstaff pricked up his ears at the mention of the pile of gold and silver

"Do you intone the service?"
This was too much for his religious education He hesitated, then admitted that he did. I refrained from pressing him further, fearing that he would suspect me. Having finished my breakfast, I arose, saying: "I wish you would try your persuasive powers on Friend Bittinger. I would like to see some of that pile go to good works."

My plan was that we two parsons should spend the night in the house, Wagsaff would pick the lock of the supposed treasure room and go in, and I would see that he didn't get out without a surrender.

Methods in Days When "No Lickin', No Larnin'," Was the Rule.

The schoolroom practices of a half century ago are incredible to a modern pupil. It is well that they have not been continued, but an account of them by an eyewitness is often amusing. One incident from A. H. Hall's "Old Bradford Schooldays" brings up a teacher who clung to the old principle. "No lickin', no larnin'."

Horace Walton, at recess, climbed to the top of the highest nut tree and, losing his hold, fell to the ground. He struck on many of the limbs in his $45 monthly when he is appointed and on either side, "we will work the—I mean we will make the attempt to soften this man's heart together." that master at last succeeded in bringing things into routine order in the school. Oysters as Rat Traps.

Catching rats with oyster shells is the unique method employed by some pearlers round about Broome, Western Australia. They leave a large oyster on the floor of the cabin at night. It opens for a breath of fresh air, and the smell of fresh meat attracts the rats. When the rodent thinks he'll ry a little supper, the oyster suddenty decides that he doesn't like fresh Air. Next morning the shell is pried open and the dead rat thrown overboard.

WALTON'S FAST.

The "Plunger" Did Even More That the Doctor Suggested.

Race track lovers of some years ago all knew "Plunger" Walton-Francis Theodore Walton, as he was christened. Everything that Walton did he did as thoroughly as he plunged on the races. This habit was illustrated by his famous fast. Rheumatism caused him considerable suffering for years. Across the street from him lived a doctor, who said one day:
"Walton, you cat too much. That's what's the matter with you. Do as I say and you will cure your rheumatism. Don't let food tempt you so much. Just taper off your meals, and don't eat except when you really feel like it." Everything that Walton did b

"That advice of yours sounded easy, and I didn't eat a morsel for twenty-one days. No. sir; not a single particle of food passed my lips. Every hour that I was awake I did drink a glass of water. I suffered no great pangs of hunger. I was comfortable and had a good time. It was my wife's anxiety that made me break my fast. She got the notion that I was losing weight too fast. It Possesses an Actual Cash Value in the Workshop.

That proper ventilation in factories has an actual cash value has been well illustrated in the case of a firm of shirt and collar manufacturers in Ber-lin, Ont., where the following results have been obtained from four years attention to the material welfare of

The amount of business made was The amount of business made was doubled, wages increased 50 per cent, by cutting out "contingent help" the number of employees was reduced 20 per cent, the absences on account of sickness were reduced one-third. To the firm this meant that 430 employees did 90 per cent more work in one year than was accomplished by 522 employees in a similar period four years previous. To the workers it meant that 430 of them earned in twelve months $28,000 more than 522 did during a previous twelve months.

$28.000 more than 522 did during a previous twelve months.

Dr. C. E. A. Winslow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology made a study of the amount of illness prevailing among the female operators in the telephone central at Cambridge. Massa, before and after the installation of a system of artificial ventilation. The figures obtained by him show that during the two winters preceding the change, when doors and windows had to be kept closed, on the average about one girl in twenty was absent daily because of illness. During the corresponding months of the following year, when the ventilation had been materially improved, only one girl in fifty rially improved, only one girl in fift, was absent from duty each day .-- Si which he spoke was just out of college, in Chicago and out of work, answered an advertisement offering a position, addressing, as instructed, "T24." He inclosed his reply in a large red envelope that could be seen and recognized at a distance. He was in the newspaper office early the following morning. In one of the boxes in which replies to advertisements were kept he saw his red envelope. He waited three hours until the letter in that box was given to a man calling for them. He followed the man to a west side factory. As the messenger laid the bunch of letters on the manager's desk the job hunter was standing by it.

"I'm ready to go to work," he said. The manager's reply was not "elegant," but in addition to being exclamatory it was interrogatory. How did he manage to present himself on the scene? MOLDED HIS DEATH TOLL.

Legend of "the Poor Sinner's Bell"
That Was Cast In Breslau. That Was Cast in Breslau.

The poor sinner's bell is a bell in the city of Breslau, in the province of Silesia, Prussia, and hangs in the tower of one of the city churches. It was cast July 17, 1336, according to historic records. It is said that a great bell founder of the place had undertaken to make the finest church bell he had ever made.

When the metal was meited the founder withdrew for a few moments.

founder withdrew for a few moments leaving a boy to watch the furnace and enjoining him not to meddle with the catch that held the moiten metal, but the boy disobeyed the caution, and when he saw the metal flowing into the mold he called the founder.

the mold he called the founder.

The latter rushed in and, seeing, as he thought, his work of weeks undone and his masterpiece ruined, struck the boy a blow that caused his immediate death. When the metal cooled and the mold was opened the bell was found to be not only perfect, but of marvelous sweetness of tone.

The founder gave himself up to the authorities, was tried and condemned to death. On the day of his execution the bell was rung to call people to at-

SEEING A PURPLE COW.

"Suppose while you are in the country in summer," said he, "you chance upon a Hoistein cow grazing on a hill-side. Hoisteins, of course you know, are black and white. The pasture is green. Off at one side is a gray unpainted barn. Do you stagger with surprise when you notice that that cow is purple? Not a bit of it. If it were not purple you might reasonably consuit an oculist. That would be a sign that your eyes needed attention.

"But you may never have tried to figure out why the cow is purple. Here

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES

GOVERNMENT. To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check.

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital

"And who is my.master?"
"You know well enough without my telling you."
"Tell me. please."

A party of travelers sat chatting on the deck of a Pacific liner, and the conversation turned upon British lords marrying American heiresses. One of the party whispered to a lady sitting next to him:

"That Englishman is one of 'em. "The short Englishman who talls himself Sully."

"The short, thick one. The other is his lordship s secretary."

Young Peterson, who made this statement, was a great wag. He did not expect it to be believed and was astonished later when one of the girls of the party said to him:

"Do you know that one of those Englishmen is an earl going over to America for a rich wife?"

"You don't mean it!" said Peterson with feigned astonishment.

Peterson winked at a man standing near to follow him, and the two went.

"But the other, the secretary, it's my opinion he's a gentleman and won't consent to any such imposition."
"It's no imposition for him to play an unimportant part. Besides, if he denies the story he won't be believed." His lordship was Thomas Sully, a bagman, or what in America we call a commercial traveler. Peterson told him of the plot, and he entered into the spirit of it at once. Nothing was said to the other Englishman, whose name appeared on the list of passengers as Arthur Craven. He was of a serious cast and not likely to have any sympathy with the joke or consent to bone of the principal participants.

Great was the amusement derived by Peterson and his friend Tomkins, whom he had admitted to the secret, at the marked attentions paid to the bagman, whose title, Earl of Camberwall, was let out by the apparently incautious display of an envelope that he had addressed to himself for the purpose. There were many English people on board, all of whom were very obsequious to a nobleman of their own country. Several American girls, who, though not multimillion airesses, were well supplied with funds, entered the lists for the prize.

crossbar the gun pointer strained his eyes in the impossible effort to adjust their focus to three widely separated objects simultaneously, the rear sight a few inches away, the front sight a dozen feet distant from the rear one and the target anywhere from 1,500 to 13,000 yards. Ordnance experts worked over this problem, and the result was the introduction of the telescopic sight and the crossbars—two pieces of crossed wire at the end of the telescope. When these "cut" on electric button and the gun does the rest.

It is eminently spectacular, this great gun battery practice. This is from a description given to the writer by an umpire whose station was on one of the ships towing the target: "Through the glasses you could see a needle-like flash from the firing ship, a vessel so far distant that her outline was but an indistinct blur upon the horizon. Having caught the flash, the glass is dropped, the eye goes to the stop watch, and you begin to countone, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven—and about then you will hear a faint drone which in the next fraction of a second swells into a mighty roar—the roar of an express rushing at the rate of thirty miles a second. With the roar come a flying of splinters from the target, a geyser leaping a hundred feet in air, then another and another, as the ricocheting shell glances from wave to wave, and then, last of all, the faint, faroff boom of the gun which had huried the missile."—Harper's Weekly. stop watch, and you begin to counthas got ahead of his master. "You let my secretary alone," replied Sully facetlously. "All I want of him is not to give my incog. away till "releft the skip. The men are opening wine for me, and the women are feeding me on good things. But I want to get away before they find out the game we're working on them."

And so the ship sailed on. Every day was a repetition of another—meals, sitting on deck, constitutional walks between 4 and 6 in the afternoon and early to bed. One thing continued to enliven the voyage for Peterson and Tomkins—the attentions showered on Sully and the airs the bagman put on in support of his noble position. A number of the women found a pleasant excitement in angling for his lordshie's favor.

Curfsw Still Rings, and District Schools
Still Flourish.

Everywhere, even in the midst of the most flourishing and progressive of the work and evidences of the lives of the fathers—old houses, rows of stately eim trees, old business buildings with their queer gable ends to the street—while ever and anon there are still to be encountered men who adhere to the dress and fashion of life current two or three generations ago.

There are everywhere reminders of the glory that was. There are many same foods are served in the same manner.

What are called primitive customs survive. The curfew rings from many church steeples, though leniency is practiced with respect to the ordering of lights out at the same time. The district school exists everywhere in the more remote and smaller sections. The town academy has not wholly surrendered to the modern high school. A majority of the farms are still worked as great-grandfather worked his, though this is cited solely as a pictorial element of charm, not as an intorial element of charm, not as an industrial fact to flaunt.

The New England style of architecture gives way to more modern conceptions with stubborn slowness. Most of the country churches are redolent with suggestion of the storied past, and the echoes from the pulpits often serve to strengthen the illusion. As scene shifters were preparing to "close in" and the property man stood in the wings ready to seize on his perquisite the leg of mutton was seen slowly to ascend.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Mic. vi, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Lesson I.—Naaman healed, II Kings v. 1-14. Golden Text, Isa. xiv, 22, "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none else." Leprosy, a peculiar type of sin and sinners, Great sinners may be great in their own sight and in the easteem of others, but in God's sight lost. All can be saved if willing to submit to God and His way. Money cannot buy it.

Lesson I.—Elisha's heavenly defenders, II Kings vi, 8-17. Golden Text, Ps. xci, 11, "For He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep the in all thy ways." God knows all two ways of entombing goes on until suppose the sand stands and the process of entombing goes on until suppose the sand stands and the process of entombing goes on until suppose the sand stands and the sand piles up in great drifts, like sand piles be saved if willing to submit to God and His way. Money cannot buy it.

LESSON 11.—Elisha's heavenly defenders, II Kings vi, 8-17. Golden Text, Ps. xci, 11, "For He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways." God knows all our ways and our going out and coming in, and also our thoughts (Ps. exxxix and Ezek. xi, 5). If God befor us, who can be against us? God for us, who can be against us? God with us is more than all who can be with us is more than all who can be against us. Opened eyes to see the unseen is our great need. He can do it.
LESSON III.—Joash, the boy king, II Kings xi, 9-20. Golden Text, Ps. cxix, 2, "Blessed are they that keep His testimonies and that seek Him with the whole heart." Ten times in this chapter we find the house of the Lord, or the temple of the Lord, or the temple of the Lord, care of His chosen king, whether it be David or people. God will take care of His chosen king, whether it be David or Joash or His Messiah.

LESSON IV.—The temple repaired, II Kings xii, 4-15. Golden Text, I Chron. xxix, 9. "Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly." A chest beside the altar to receive the willing offerings of the people was the method of obtaining money which the Lord blessed. At least twelve times in this blessed. At least twelve times in this blessed. At least twelve times in this chapter the expression "the house of the Lord" occurs. Devotion to the Lord because of His sacrifice will bring all needed funds.

LESSON V.—God's pity for the heathen, Jonah ill, 5 to iv, 11. Golden Text. Matt. xxviii. 19, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations." Jesus (Christ believed the story of Lorah and Christ believed the story of Jonah and those who question it question the veracity of Jesus (Matt. xii, 39-41). Jonah was willing that the people of Nineveh should perish: the Lord is not Nineveh should perish; the Lord is not willing that any should perish (II Pet. iii, 9). Note the things which God prepared and used—a wind, a fish, a worm, a gourd, and even rebellious Jonah.

Third in his little list he placed himself, the second person was Napoleon Bonaparte, and the first and foremost was George Bryan Brummel, Beau Brummel, "king of the beaux" and "Le Roi de Calais."—From Jerroid's "Beaux and Dandies."

At another time he presided over the culinary department of the Crockfords, but his favorite master was Frederick, duke of York. When the royal gormand died his bereaved chef pathetically ejaculated: "Ah, mon pauvre duc, how much you will miss me, wherever you are gone to!"

Odd Word Survivals.

Odd Word Survivals.
Far away back in the days when the English language was in its infancy there were poets who wrote of the blossoms on the trees in the spring. They didn't write "blossom," however, but used the word "blow" and made it rhyme with snow and flow. When they wished to sing of the beautiful mass of apple or hawthorn flowers they called it the "blowth." This word is found in the dictionaries, which assert that it is obselete, but it is very much alive in Rockingham is very much alive in Rockingham county, N. H., and York county, Me. The orchardist thereabout speaks of a "full blowth" or "light blowth" on his trees in May and predicts a good or poor "set" of the fruit in consequence. An English Violinist Who Won Fame In the Seventeenth Century. Public concerts owe their direct en-couragement to John Banister, who had won fame by his playing on the violin and who succeeded the celebrated Baltzar as leader of Charles II.'s band of twenty-four violins. Pepys, in an entry in his diary for February, 1607, tells us the court gossip of the day—"how the king's viailin Banister is mad that the king hath a Frenchman come to be chief of some part of the king's musique."

Banister's concerts at the close of the year 1672 were advertised in the London Gazette as follows: "These are to give notice that at Mr. John Banister's house mow called the musick school, over against the George tayister's house mow called the musick school, over against the George tays ern in White Fryers, the present Monday will be musick performed by excellent musters, beginning precisely at 4 of the clock in the afternoon, and every afternoon for the future precisely at the same hour."

Four years later on we read again. "At the academy in Little Lincolis's Inn Fields will begin the first part of the parley of instruments, composed by Mr. John Banister." The admission was at this time as a rule a shillby Mr. John Bainster. The advantage sion was at this time as a rule a shilling, and these concerts seem to have been held pretty regularly down to within a short time of Banister's death, which took place in 1679.—London Graphic

A SEA SECRET

Illustrating the Fact That Dead Men Tell No Tales

from one of these trips we touched at Singapore. On leaving Singapore we had got well away from land when I received an order to put on more speed. I did so and was jogging along at a pretty good rate when I got another order to run her for all she was worth. I told the stokers to heave in more coal, opened all the drafts and turned on all the steam she would bear. At that moment the first mate came down the iron steps white as a sheet and told me that we were pursued by a suspicious looking craft, and, though she flew the British flag, the captain was sure she was run by Asiatics. She was a sailer, junk built, and since a sliff breeze was blowing she was making about as good headway as we. We were moving against the wind, while flue other was crossing it, thus getting all the benefit from it that was possible. She stood between us and the land so we couldn't run in. Her object was to reach a given point as soon as we. What we should have done was to turn back as soon as we suspected the eraft, but the cantain, not really know.

low. I was reduced by illness, and Jacobson was small, but wiry.

What we should have done was to turn back as soon as we suspected the craft, but the captain, not really know. By this time the coming ships were to be made out as a fleet of war vestels. Had we been up with the times we would have recognized them as the fleet of Admiral Dewey, which had reckoned wrong. The first thing I was hearing a boom. Then I got an order from above to shut off steam.

Looking out of my porthole, I saw the viliainous looking thing sailing in a course to head us off, while a lot of copper colored rascals aboard of her were, raising a skull and crossbones.

engine. Two other men came down, and one of the first two went on deck.

commander and the other was his in-terpreter.

Nothing can induce me to give an account of the incidents that occurred during the next half hour. Thank heaven I did not witness them. I will heaven I did not witness them. I will only say that the crew, excepting Jack Coyne and a Swede, Jacobson, who begged to be allowed to join the pirate gang, and I, were forced to walk the plank. There were also several passengers, whose names I will give in a separate paper, who shared the same fate.

While our vessel was not much of a craft, it was far better than that of a craft, it was far better than that of our captors, having the advantage of steam power, and they decided to scuttle the sailer and use the steamer. This they did during the night, which was coming on, and in the morning the Mary Blane was sailing on, to all outward appearances, as if nothing had happened. The pirates gave other ships as wide a berth as possible and when unable to do so kept only the two men of our crew whose lives had been spared on deck.

And so it was that we three white men were forced to obey the orders of some twenty copper colored devils, thus enabling them to attract small boats, murder the occupants and appropriate anything of value found in them. No ship of any importance was a craft, it was far better than that of propriate anything of value found in them. No ship of any importance was attacked. When we were spoken by such Coyne or Jacobson was forced to run up signals stating that we were the Mary Blane of New York, homeward bound, and all was well aboard. The murders we saw committed and indirectly helped to commit haunt me and will always haunt me and will always haunt me, My two other white companions in misery and iniquity were often compelled to do these things directly. The stain on my own conscience is that had I refused to run the engine and been shot down for my disobedience of orders the pirates would have been obliged to run the ashore or abandon her for a captured saller, for there was not an ngineer among them. One afternoon late in June, 1898, we

One afternoon late in June, 1898, we were cruising off the island of Formosa. I was so worn with my condition that I showed signs of breaking down. Through the interpreter I ask ed permission to be permitted to go on deck for fresh air. My life being necessary to my masters, their captain consented that Jacobson should come down into the engine room, and since there was nothing of importance to do there I should go up, being ready for a call from below if my services were needed.

We were steaming along northward at about six knots when I saw on the horizon a faint line that looked like smoke. There were but few of the services were needed.

We were steaming along northward at about six knots when I saw on the horizon a faint line that looked like smoke. There were but few of the pirates on deck, most of them being below drinking liquor that had been captured the day before. Those on deck had been drinking, but were considered able to keep watch over the white members of the crew. But they were not sufficiently in control of their faculties to notice the line of smoke cern.

At the end of the last century I was engineer on the Mary Blane, a small steamer used for bringing Japanese goods to America, returning loaded with American supplies to be sold in the Island empire. On our way home the Island empire. On our way home steadily.

steadily.

I gave Coyne a meaning look, combined first of a glance at what was approaching, second of one at the Maiays and third at a companionway. What all this was meant to convey was a suggestion that steamers were approaching, that we might overpower the three pirates, close the companionway and signal for assistance. Coyne why was desparent to understood ionway and signal for assistance. Coyne, who was desperate, understood and showed by looks and pantomime that he was eager for the attempt.

Realizing that we would need Jacobson. I went down into the engine room, where he was without guard, and told him of our plan. I also agreed with him that he should come up as near as possible to the deck without being seen and be ready to shut and bolt the companionway doors while Coyne and I were overpowering two of the Malays. Just how we were to do this must depend upon circumstances. Coyne was a powerful fellow. I was reduced by illness, and Jacobson was small, but wiry.

flag in place of the union jack ut England, which had been hauled down. Moreover, some masked portholes had been opened and half a dozen small guns run out.

It was plain to me that all was up with us. Not a soul came down into the engine room to tell me anything, but since I could see for myself what was going on I knew they were all plaralyzed with fear. I would not leave my post, first, because there was nothing to be gained by doing so, and second. I might at any time receive an order.

The pirate passed to a point where I couldn't see her, but it was not long before I heard a tramping on deck that told me we were boarded, and down came a couple of swarthy Malays, who covered me, the one with a revolver, the other with a cutlass, who covered me with a cutlass spoke enough English to tell me that I was to stay where I was and run the engine. Two other men came down, and one of the first two went on deck.

"It has often cecurred to me," I said, "It has often occurred to me," I said, when I stopped him.

"It has often occurred to me," I said, "that if we were taken we three would

"that if we were taken we three would be hanged for piracy with the others. We have the ship safe enough. Suppose we let these vessels pass. We may save our necks by doing so."

Since I was the only skilled man of the three the others agreed to follow my suggestion. The pirates were confined within the forward part of the ship, having no access to the other parts, while we had free descent to the engine room.

engine room.

I shrink from giving the last part of the story, which was inspired partly by vengeance and partly with the knowledge that dead men tell no tales. We let the fleet pass us without much interest in it, we being engrossed by our own affairs. Then we scraped to gether all the cumbustibles we could find and made them ready to be fired.

A hoat was lowered and applying a boat was lowered, and, applying a match to our kindling, we went down

HOTEL BEDS ABROAD.

To Get into Some of Them One Has to Use a Stepladder.
The European bed always strikes the untaritiated American traveler as a huge joke. In France they commence narrowness, and he looks dubiously at the enormous Turkey red cotton "couvre pied" of elderdown, which "course pied" of eiderdown, which seems something like a mountain, and he wonders how he is ever going to bear all that extra weight on his person. But when he has slipped between the sheets and the grateful warmth communicates itself to his cold bones—if it is winter they are sure to be like leicles—he discovers that it is deceptively light and deliciously comfortable.

In Switzerland the beds attain a little more height, but it is in Gertilles.

that even the thick headed German watchman understood, penetrated to the removest chamber in the inn.

"I was half awake," he explained afterward, "and had been dreaming of standing on Table rock, in the Yosemite, I started to get out of bed—and began to fall. Naturally I supposed I was plunging to the bottom of that precipice, and I'll leave it to you if any one wouldn't have let out a yell when he thought he was going to be dashed to death." to death." Sometimes in European hotels the

Sometimes in European hotels the tourist is taken solemnly to one side and told that by paying a few francs or lire more he can have the royal bedchamber. A certain hotel in Sorrento, where a dozen or more royal heads have lain in one season, is even more generous, for if the rooms are empty they make no extra charge. And the traveler loves to recount when he is back on his native heath how his cheek pressed the same pillow that cheek pressed the same pillow that had been used by the little queen of Holland or the king of Saxony .- New

BALANCING THE SEXES.

One of the most subtle and interest-ing problems of life, according to the eminent statistician and student of heredity, Professor R. J. Ewart, is the numerical relationship of sex and its influence upon the body politic. The woman's rights movement is in essence woman's rights movement is in essence a mathematical and statistical problem, according to him. There is not a general advance of woman, as some sociologists assert. There is a sudden manifestation of her power, a period of supremacy and then a decline of her status.

The explanation is statistical mainly.

True, it has always been something of a puzzle why the proportion of each kind, apparently with little or no underlying reason, is produced in the right numbers. The argument that if such were not the case the particular species would not survive does not reveal to us the methods by which this object has been achieved. That some mechanism must exist by means of which within certain limits the number of males and females born is regulated is proved by the facts of history, where we have numerous examples of wars and other social upheavals where wars and other social upheavals where males have largely suffered, and yet within an apparently short period of time, as measured by such events, a balance has again been established. balance has again been established.

The sex equilibrium may be compared to that of a gyroscope, where the greater the disturbance of position the greater is the force tending to reestablish its natural stand while in motion.—Current Literature.

"I have," she replied. "How do you account for it?" he inquired.

"The poor man marries and the rich one doesn't." she answered. "A man is much more disposed to divide nothing with a woman than he is to divide something, you know."

Courageous Acts of the Men In the Iron Masks.

A FINE DISPLAY OF NERVE.

When Billy Evans Braved the On slaught of a Chicago Mob and Won Out-A Notable Decision by O'Day. An Umpire Who Saved Baseball

"Umpires are brave men-at least the great majority of them. One of the bravest things I ever saw was the act of Billy Evans on the old White Sox grounds in Chicago," writes Hugh Ful-In Switzerland the beds attain a little more height, but it is in Germany that they become of such an altitude as to necessitate a pair of steps to mount them. One tourist, finding that one leg of the stepladder was broken, solved his difficulty by going to the extreme end of the room, taking a running start and landing with a flying leap in the midst of the Turkey red elderdown. He crawled in under the crocheed counterpane and was soon fast asleep. Some time in the night he became sleeply aware of a consuming thirst and started to get out of bed for a drink. A started shriek, followed by some swear words that even the thick headed German watchman understood, penetrated to the removest chamber in the inn.

"I was half awake," he explained afterward, "and had been dreaming of standbee on Table rock. In the Yosem. were throwing bottles at the umpire.

"They are 'square men,' these umpires, forced to be a bit gruff and to fight, but their devotion to their work and their honest effort to discharge their duties mark them as men of high integrity. And they are 'game.' I saw Bob Emsile once when a foul ball struck him over the heart. The pain was excruciating. His face grew pain was excruciating. "One night I saw politicians, wealthy men, club owners, argue for hours with an umpire. All they wanted him to say was 'I didn't see it.' Upon those words hung the fate of a champlonship, the future of a major league and the honesty of baseball. The umpire replied, 'But, — it, I did see it.' And he saved baseball."

HUMAN SKULL PUZZLE.

A Cavity That May Have Been the Seat of a Sixth Sense.

Despite the progress of physiology the study of the human body is full of mystery. Some of its well known organs have never revealed either their uses or the reason of their creation. The part played by the spiene in human life was discovered but recently. It is now regarded as one of the principal agents in the circulation of the blood. But there are in the marvelous human organism mysterious parts which it is possible that no savant, however profound his learning, may ever understand. For instance, in the skull, behind the cartinge of the nose, there is a little cavity of unknown origin. Physiologists believe that at one time—several thousand generations ago—it contained a gland consisting of two lobes Joined by their common base.

This cavity—the delta turcica—is, in the opinion of certain savants, the vestice of a sixth sense which was of great use to the antedliuvian ancestors of man. It is believed that this little gland enabled them to see in the darkness when they had not yet learned thy secret of procuring light; that it was the seat of the mysterious sense of situation or locality, the power to orient their course, the sense so highly developed to this day in savages and certain animals. The theory is plausible, but it is doubtful whether man will ever acquire any real knowledge of the reason for the existence of the delta turcica.—Exchange.

Manufacturers Are Disturbed
The manufacturers of New England are apparently a good deal concerned over the possibility that there may be an immediate revision of the tariff at the present session of congress. Some of them say that it they are to expect this as a result of a coalition between the Democrats and the insurgent Republicans it will mean that they will have to curtail operations until after this has been accomplished. It is said by those who speak from experience in such matters that a considerable lowering of the tariff would mean a large loss on woolen goods manufactured in the country are made in this commonwealth. The same is also true of cotton goods of the finer grade, as well as boots and shoes. It is quite natural that the curtailment of production along all lines of business which would be affected by the tariff should result in a growing volume of unemployment. Manufacturers say that in ordinary times they are accustomed to manufacturer goods and pile them up in storehouses against future demand. When they cease to do this labor naturally suffers loss of employment and wages to a considerable extent and that is the case at present. The Herald also calls attention to the fact that tuberculosis is now regarded as a contagious disease and as such, isolation is peremptory, and that advanced cases as well as others must be cared for in a special institution. The Herald also repels the criticism of the care of neglected children, declaring that the state board of charity must take and care for the children which the courts assign to it. The Herald also points out various other errors in the message of Mr. Foss and appears to show that the governor was, to say the least, under a serious misapprehension when he wrote it.

Savings Department.

The beginning of successful operation of UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, and the possibility of legislation, by Congress, looking to the establishment of NATIONAL SAVINGS BANKS, as outlined by Senator Aldrich, in his tentative plan for a new banking law, seems to indicate a popular demand for places of savings under the control and supervision of the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

To meet this legitimate demand and to extend increased banking facilities to the people of Woburn and vicinity, the WOBURN NATIONAL BANK has opened a new department to be known as its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT, and will receive deposits of money to bear interest FROM DATE OFDEPOSIT at the rate of three per centum per annum on sums not less than $100. These deposits however will not be subject to check

All deposits in this bank are GUARANTEED by its capital stock of $100,000, its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1910, of $68,860.34, and by the personal liability of its responsible stockholders to the extent of an additional $100,000.

The doctor did no know what the allment was, but he prescribed an ointment which was practically lard. The man returned to the hospifal the following week.

"Ah, sir," he said. "I begin to recognize why it is that St. Bartholomew's hospital has such a great reputation! I come from Leicester and have been to all the doctors in Leicester. Your ointment has done me more good in one week than all the olument of the doctors of Leicester in many months."

That result, added the doctor, was owing to the fact that the man came to St. Bartholomew's believing that he could be cured there.—London Graphic. the hospital the following week

Lesson I .- Third Quarter. For July 2, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. xxxvii, 21-36. Memory Verses, 33-35—Golden Text, Ps. xivi, 1—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns. The story of Hezekiah is fully recorded not only in II Kings and

II Chronicles, but also in the prophecy of Isaiah. A few weeks ago we were considering how he began his reign by repairing and cleansing the temple and by keeping the Passover for all Israel. summoning the twelve tribes thereto He wrought that which was good and right and truth before the Lord his God, and he sought God with all his God, and he sought God with all his heart and prospered (II Chron. xxxi. 20, 21). Such devotion to the living and true God was more than the devil could stand, for all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution (II Tim. III, 12), so he stirred up the king of Assyria to fight against Jeru-salem and by words and latters to salem and by words and letters to mock and blaspheme the God of Israel by presents himself with a new bride and ask that the marriage service may be speedily read.

Don't De the Watering Act in the Evening Just Before Dark.
The following article was prepared by representatives of the national council of horticulture to stimulate interest in gardening:

While plants can stand great extremes in temperature, corresponding extremes in moisture surely will tend to ruin if not to kill the strongest of them. Water should be given only when needed, then in such quantity that the soil is soaked. Soft stemmed plants, especially those with large leaves, need much more water than hard wooded, slow growing varieties, and, while the former kind easily recover from drought, the larter usually suffer permanent injury from extremes.

Heavy clayey soils sour easily, while dight loamy soils dry out quickly, and unless carefully watched the plants in such soil soon will wilt. In either as tis better to water thoroughly and only when needed than to water sparingly and often.

The season and time of day should be considered in watering. Plants not in active growth should be watered sparingly until they have regained the growth of fungous diseases, as the foliage. Watering in the evening, just before dark, will greatly aid the growth of fungous diseases, as the foliage will continue wet through the night. It also causes "dampling wenther.

Musical Sounds and Noise. sounds fly farther and are heard at greater distance than those which at greater distance than those which are more loud and nolsy. If we go on the outside of a town during a fair at the distance of a mile we hear the musical instruments, but the din of the multitude, which is so overpowering in the place, can scarcely be heard, the noise dying on the spot. To those who are conversant with the power of musical instruments the following observations will be understood: The violins made at Cremona about the year 1600 are superior in tone to any of a later date, age seeming to dispossess them of superior in tone to any of a later date, age seeming to dispossess them of their noisy qualities and leaving nothing but the pure tone. If a modern violin is played by the side of one of those instruments it will appear much the louder of the two, but on receding a hundred paces when compared with the Cremona it will scarcely be heard.—London Globe.

The Nebular Hypothesis.

The nebular hypothesis is the name generally given to the theory put forth by the celebrated Laplace in "Systems du Monde" in the year 1796. His idea was that the solar system was evolved mechanically from a vast diffused revolving nebula, and that nebulae were the early stages in the formation of planets and their satellites by cooling condensation and contraction, according to certain laws of mathematics. This theory was accepted by Sir Willam Herschel and, though at first bit terly opposed in many quarters, is now generally accepted by astronomers and scholars and is taught in most schools and colleges.—New York American.

The Lion's Taste. Miss Charlotte Mansheld in 'Me Rhodesia' tells of a native South African boy who came to England and was taken to the Hippodrome. "Instead of enjoying the entertainment. however, he begged, with tears in his eyes, to be taken out, and he said:
"There are lions over there"-pointing. There are lions over there'-pointing to the stage-'and I am the only black to the stage—and I am the only black man here.' It is a well known fact that a man eating lion will make a meal off a black in preference to a white man if it is a question of choice. Perhaps the flavor is stronger and the taste for white flesh—like caviar—has to be acquired."
